Nazis Call Halt In Drive Against Jews, Catholics

Bremen Incident Topic at Session

Leaders Consult Hitler; Plebiscite on Policy Is Considered.

The German Situation.

Official circles in Washington expected a dilomatic protest shortly regarding the Bremen incident.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 29.—Nazi chieftains today called off their drive on "state enemies," it was learned from a high source. According to this source the suppression of Jews and Catholics was ordered soft-pedaled because of repercussions of the Nazi drive in foreign lands.

The decision was rechead after a hurried council at the mountain retreat of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler at Oversalzberg. In attendance, it was said, were Gen. Werner von Blumberg, minister of war; Herman William Goering, head of the secret police, and other Nazi leaders.

Impressed with political expediency of halting Publisher Julius Streicher's Jewish strictures, the leaders at the week-end conference, it was learned, considered whether to call a national plesiscite to show confidence in the Nazi regime.

Would Compromise.

The leaders were told of inimical reactions abroad to moves against Jews, Catholics and the Steel Helmets. They affected a change whereby Jews will be considered for military enlistment if they have only two Jewish grandparents, a proposal seen as the first breach in the non-Aryan warfare.

A national police campaign was planned against individual acts of terrorism which made it plain that further pressure against Jews, Bolsheviks and other "reactionaries" will be in the state's hands.

Special attention was reported to have been paid to reactinos in England, with whom Germany seeks to cultivate friendship. The episodes in New York—the riot on the liner Bremen and Mayor LaGuardia's denial of a license to a German masseur—also were discussed.

[Official circles in Washington expect a diplomatic protest from Germany shortly regarding the ripping of the flag from the liner Bremen in New York, the Associated Press reported. Assistant Secretary of State W. J. Carr, while acting head of the department, expressed regret informally over the incident, but it was understood officials of the Reich do not consider such an expression adequate.—Editor's note.]

Olympics Topic.

It was reported that Franz Seldte vainly sought an interview regarding the action against the Steel Helmets, which he heads.

Further evidence that the battles are abating is noticed in the removal of "don't buy from Jews" stickers from Jewish shops.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, ambassador extraordinary, and Hjalmar Schact, head of the Reichsbank, are reported to have warned Hitler of the unfriendly reception of war veterans abroad of the Nazi fights, especially the suspension of the Steel Helmets.

Cognizance also was taken of the possible effect of the state's policies on the 1936 Olympic games, on which Germany was banking strongly as an agency of favorable propaganda as well as a succesful financial event.

The plebiscite, if held, probably would be much like previous demonstrations. The populace, after a fanfare of propaganda, would be asked to vote its confidence on the administration's recent actions despite the attacks by enemies abroad."

Meanwhile, the Catholic world learned with sorrow of the sentencing in Hanau of Father Ludwig Roth to eight months imprisonment

PARIS.

"Boche! Boche"

THE Georges Clemenceau "Tiger of France," seized Woodrow Wilson by the throat, spat in his face and called him "Boche, Boche," during the Versailles Peace Conference.

The incident was described in memoirs of Sir J. Basil Thompson, former British intelligence service chief who guarded statesmen at Versailles, according to L'Intransigeant. They included this hitherto untold incident:

During peace conference discussion of the Saar, Wilson and Clemenceau were already near the breaking point when the "Tiger" offered Andre Tardieu's compromise solution.

Wilson rose, straightened his glasses and replied, France should have nothing to do with the Saar. He rejected all of Clemenceau's suggestions.

The "Tiger" rose, white with fury. He spluttered something unintelligible to his colleagues about the conference table, then sprang at Wilson's throat.

He shook him violently, as though to strangle him, spat, and shouted: "Boche! Boche!"

America's apostle of peace picked up his glasses, ran to the door—then changed his mind.

He returned to a fireplace, contemplated the damage in a mirror. His cravat was unfastened, his collar torn. With the room deathlike in its silence he repaired the damage as best he could.

David Lloyd George, then British prime minister, witnessed the scene in silence. He contemplated his pencil point, avoiding the Tiger's attention.

His clothing adjusted as best as possible Wilson squared his shoulders, crossed the room and went slowly through the door.

"That," Sir Basil said, "was the peace conference's most dramatic moment."

The Purple Cow.

GELETT BURGESS, the man who wrote the jingle about rather seeing a purple cow than being one, landed in America after a ten years' absence abroad and admitted that the innocent quatrain had complicated his life considerably.

"It haunts me," he said. "It hangs about my neck like a vengeful albatross. But I'm resigned to it. So I wrote a sequel. Listen—"

"Ah, yes, I wrote the purple cow,
"I'm sorry now I wrote it.
"But I can tell you anyhow,
"I'll kill you if you quote it."

Then he said that he would visit awhile in this country, go to Hollywood to see some people about a story he wrote, and then perhaps go back to Europe.

He said he would be 70 years old next January.

Addis Ababa Cheers Army, Off to Border

10,000 Field Troops Stir Wild Acclaim; All Well Armed.

League's Committee on Treaty Repudiation Is Stalemated.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

The League of Nations special committee on restraint for treaty repudiators adjourned today after a stalemate, further snarling hopes of the powers' representatives averting an Italo-Ethiopian war.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, July 29.—Emperor Haile Selassie's field army from southern Ethiopia arrived today and gave the stirred capital its first evidence of the country's large scale military movement.

The troops, equipped with the most modern implements of war, supplied by the emperor, departed soon after arrival for an undisclosed destination. It was said they went to the frontier of Eritrea, the Italian colony on the east.

The appearance of the modernly-equipped and well-disciplined troops excited the populace to enthusiastic demonstrations. The general mobilization has not been formally proclaimed and martial activities have been limited to drilling. Hence the sight caused cheers.

10,000 Strong.

The 10,000 troops under the command of Dedjazmatch Haptemikael, former cabinet minister, marched from their quarters in Gamu.

The wife of the commander, one of the highest of the nobility, is the granddaughter of Ras Tessamma, late regent of Ethiopia during Emperor Menelik's illness, demanded arms and volunteers to join the army and fight in her nation's defense. Authoritative sources expressed the belief the emperor was seriously considering her request.

Another woman, speaking in the public square, declared to the patriotic throng:

"The Italians accuse us of being savages, which is a fact, inasmuch as we are the savages of a family of lions."

Her reference was to the emperor, known as "The Lion of Judah."

Volunteers Fill Streets.

Following the passing of the troops, volunteers filled the streets engaging in military activities. Forty-seven Ethiopian-born Armenians called on Haile Selassie to offer themselves as soldiers of his army. The emperor promised to call them when necessary.

The soldiers of the emperor wore khaki uniforms and were equipped with new rifles, machine guns and artillery. They marched with spirit.

Government officials in general denied any knowledge of a clash at Walkut, reported in the London press.

An imperial decree establishing an Ethiopian Red Cross was another item of military preparations. It was formed yesterday at a meeting of patriotic women.

Reports reached here that a number of native Somalis have revolted in Italian Somaliland and started for Ethiopia in the region of Ualual.

Rome, July 29 (AP).—The instructions six Italian experts carried with them when they departed today for the League of Nations council meeting at Geneva were summed up in well-informed circles in four words:

"Don't let Italy down!"

In the same circles this was interpreted to mean that Baron Pompeo Aloisi, seventh member of the delegation and its head, will oppose determinedly any effort by anyone to inject a general examination of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute into the council agenda. The whole weight of the Italian delegation, the spokesmen said, will be thrown behind the Italian insistence that there is only one uestion before that body; reviving the activities of the conciliation commission.

Marie Antoinette's Necklace, $100,000 Gems Stolen in N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—While thousands of persons passed a fifth avenue jewelry store late today two robbers stripped it of its stock and a ruby necklace once owned by Marie Antoinette.

Police estimated their loot as high as $100,000, exclusive of the necklace, which could not be priced. It had been on display in the show window for a week with a card by which the French government certified its authenticity.

The robbery occurred in the highly fashionable shopping district on Fifth avenue between Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth streets, at about 5 p. m. Only Lester Harran, 27, the store manager, and Joseph Frideman, 22, a nephew of Nicolai Miller, the owner, were present in the shop.

They were preparing to carry trays of jewels to the safe at the close of the business day when a well-dressed young man entered.

"I want to see Mr. Miller about purchasing a cigaret case," he told Harran.

When the manager looked up, however, it was into the yawning muzzle of a pistol. As Harran and Friedman were ordered to the rear of the store, a second man entered with a portfolio in his hand.

The manager and Friedman were bound and their mouths taped. The robbers then quietly and methodically cleaned out the jewel trays, including eight bracelets valued at $2,500 each. Only a $500 diamond ring, apparently overlooked, was left.

The Marie Antoinette necklace was placed against a background of black velvet drapes which hid it from the inside of the shop, although visible from the sidewalk. The robber had only to thrust his hand through a small aperture in the drape and, his face hidden from public gaze, remove it from the window. From the sidewalk it would appear a clerk removed the necklace.

'Insiders' Got Utility Profit Of $2,800,000

But Stockholders Received Little; Inquiry Told of Hopson Hunt.

By the Associated Press.

Profits of $2,800,000 to insiders of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. while stockholders received little or nothing were disclosed yesterday by the Senate Lobby Committee.

This testimony was drawn out as the committee headed into an investigation of the company's $700,000 fight against the Administration public utility bill and received an account of futile efforts to locate Howard C. Hopson, important A. G. E. figure, and place him upon its witness stand. Hopson's private companies were reported to have taken the large profits.

At the same time, the bitter row deadlocking the utilities bill came before the House. A heated flurry of oratory, and a parliamentary point of order raised by a supporter of the bill and sustained by Speaker Byrns, however, left the situation unchanged.

Cohen's Presence at Issue.

Representative Huddleston (Democrat), Alabama, presented a resolution, asking, in effect, for instructions on whether the House conferees should permit Ben Cohen, Administration aid, to attend conferences on the measure, as the Senate conferees desire. The point of order prevented a vote.

The Senate conferees meanwhile maintained their stand for the admittance of Cohen, who helped draft the Senate measure decreeing "death" for "unnecessary" holding companies. Huddleston and his House associates, a majority of whom oppose the "death sentence," were adamant. No effort was made to set a date for another meeting of the conferees.

The day, too, saw a defiant Texan, Carl Estes, Longview publisher, blocked in a determined effort to read to the Senate committee a statement accusing it of "mud-slinging." He got in the record, however, a vehement denial that he had been paid by the Texas Power & Light Co. for a radio speech opposing the utilities bill.

Claims Check Stolen.

The Estes statement said the publisher wanted to place in the record checks totaling $882 for his expenses while in Washington in opposition to oil legislation, and added:

"However, there is another one which I had when I came to Washington, I think in the amount of approximately $200, which was stolen from my room in the Mayflower Hotel, Saturday afternoon, when my quarters were ransacked from top to bottom while I was on a trip to Great Falls.

"Incidentally, I hope I do not have an investigator of this commitee to fight for this surprise and unauthorized shakedown."

H. A. Blomquist, chief committee investigator, told newsmen "there was not a word of truth in any such insinuation" and that the committee had not known "or cared" in what hotel Estes resided. The Texan appeared at his own request.

The day closed with the committee also refusing the privilege of a prepared statement to F. S. Burroughs, rotund vice president of A. G. E. In it he accused the committee of unfair tactics and denied that

2 Are Seized As Kidnapers Of Virginian

Man, 65, Victim; First Test of Lindbergh Law Here.

$8,000 Ransom Demand Failed, Fort Myer Captive Freed.

Old Ben King, eccentric laborer who saved a small fortune working in Arlington National Cemetery, was safe on his brother's farm last night while two men, one his landlord and "friend," were in jail charged with kidnaping him.

The story was made public yesterday by the Department of Justice, which announced that the kidnapers had confessed.

George W. Hewitt, in whose house near Fort Myer, Va., King boarded and W. W. Wood, who lived nearby, were the men arrested for the kidnaping.

In Baltimore, two charges were filed against them, one of violating the Lindbergh kidnaping law and another of conspiring to violate that law.

First Test of Law Here.

It marks the first time this dread law has been invoked where the District of Columbia is concerned, the allegation being the kidnapers transported King from Virginia through this city to Upper Marlboro, Md., in an attempt to shake him down for $8,000.

That the plot failed was due to the suspicions of a bank cashier in Upper Marlboro.

Ben King, 65 and completely bald, is known as "Cemetery Pete." For 24 years he has been a laboror in Arlington National Cemetery, and although his salary has been comparatively small, he is reputed to have saved $30,000 to $40,000.

Hewitt, in yhose home he lived, coveted King's wealth, according to the authorities, and with Wood worked out a scheme to get part of it.

Last Monday, the police say, Hewitt and King were sitting in the yard of Hewitt's home when Wood, revolver in hand, leaped out of the bushes and demanded $8,000.

Drove to Maryland.

Ordering the two men into an automobile, Wood drove to Piscataway, Md., where Oscar King, the intended victim's brother, lives.

Arriving there, King was forced to go in and get his bank book. Then he was ordered to write out a check for $8,000. The next morning the three arrived at the Southern Maryland Trust Co., at Upper Marlboro, and Hewitt and King went in to cash the check, Wood waiting outside.

William S. Hill, the cashier, became suspicious and asked the two men into his office. Then he called Prince Georges County police, who arrested both Hewitt and King.

After an investigation Hewitt was put in the Marlboro Jail and King was released.

Meantime, the Department of Justice had been called into the case and a lookout was broadcast for Wood, who had escaped when he saw the officers approaching the bank.

Wood was arrested in Arlington County Friday by Policemen Jones and Wilt and turned over to the Federal agents.

Rose to Position Via Print Shop, News Room.

Columbia, Mo., July 29.—Dr. Walter William, who rose to the presidency of theUniversity of Missouri by way of the print shop and elitorial office rather than through college classrooms, died tonight.

He was 71-years-old. An ailment from which he suffered almost a year caused the death.

Williams was forced to give up active work last winter. He resigned this spring and later was succeeded as university president by Dr. Frederick A. Middlebush.

He retained a connection with his journalism department, however, continuing as "dean emeritus." Frank L. Martin, who was associated with Williams almost from the school's inception, has been dean for five years.

Couple Drown When Car Goes Off Span Into Lake

Enfield, N. H., July 29 (U.P.).—En route home after visiting their three sons at a camp at Bridgton, Me., Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Siegel, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., drowned today when their automobile plunged off Shaker Bridge into Lake Mascoma. Siegel was in the ladies' garment business in New York.

The body of Mrs. Siegel was found floating in the water, but a diver, Fred Wallace, had to be called from Sunapee to remove Siegel's body from the submerged car. The identifications were made from the car registration and a wedding ring inscribed "Oscar to Celia."

The couple spent Saturday with their sons at Camp Koda.

Fletcher Broadcasts Appeal To Nation to Defeat New Deal

G. O. P. Chairman Sees a Plot to Subvert Constitution.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Charging that the New Deal is seeking "to pervert or subvert the Constitution," Henry Prather Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, last night called on the Nation, irrespective of party affiliation, to join in a fight to preserve the American form of government and its free institutions.

Fletcher, in one of the few speeches he has made since assuming the Republican chairmanship, sharply assailed the New Deal measures as having failed, contended that the Roosevelt Administration is making the Constitution a "scapegoat" for its failures and that consequently it is "fomenting dissatisfaction and opposition" to the Constitution.

He laid down the indictment in a Nation-wide radio speech regarded as of importance out of the ordinary for several reasons. In the first place, Fletcher's address comes after renewed political activity in the Republican encampment, especially at former President Herbert Hoover's Palo Atlo home.

Fletcher was one of several prominent Republicans who spent the week-end aboard the yacht of Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland on the Chesapeake Bay. Nice was fresh from a conference with Hoover. Undoubtedly a good part of the cruise was devoted to political discussions.

But of more significance, the speech definitely indicated that the Republicans believe they have a first-class issue against President Roosevelt in his criticism of the limitations of the Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, on efforts to deal with modern social and economic problems.

Moreover he indicated—virtually

First Draft of Wealth Levy Introduced by Doughton.

Measure to Reach Floor Wednesday

By Robert C. Albright.

While the Senate romped roughshod over another adjournment attempt, the House yesterday received the first draft of the Ways and Means Committee's $275,000,000 wealth-sharing tax bill, which already has kept Congress in session weeks beyond midsummer quitting time.

With the exception of higher rates on income surtax brackets above $50,000, the completed 96-page measure contained little in the way of revenue-producing taxes that had not already been disclosed during executive sessions of committee Democrats.

The new surtax brackets start with a 31 per cent levy on incomes between $50,000 and $56,000, and range upward to three-fourths of all income over $5,000,000. The committee expects the step-up to swell revenues from individual income by $45,400,000.

Defeat of the Republican adjournment resolution in the Senate by a 52-to-10 vote sidetracked the last congressional move to postpone tax action via the adjournment route. A parallel maneuver, sponsored by Democrats in the House a fortnight ago, was similarly smothered by Administration Democrats. As a result of both showdowns, leaders unqualifiedly forecast last night that Congress will stay here until some tax bill is enacted.

Revolt Is Possible.

Whether it will adhere to the lines of the $275,000,000 measure introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee remained a matter for speculation. That bill is being widely assailed by share-the-wealthers and conservatives alike—the former contending it fails to distribute wealth; the latter, that it fails to start low enough in the income scale to serve budget-balancing objectives.

Chairman Doughton will call his committee together again today, this time in an effort to report the tax measure. He will seek House action tomorrow or Thursday, with the majority of his committee favoring an open rule.

Besides the surtax brackets encompassed in the bill are:

Inheritance taxes ranging from 4 to 75 per cent on bequests from $10,000 to over $10,000,000; gift taxes graduated from 3 to 57 per cent on gifts of from $10,000 to over $10,000,000; corporation income taxes of 13¾ per cent up to $15,000 and of 14¼ per cent on over $15,000, and excess profits taxes ranging from 5 per cent on 8 to 12 per cent profit to 20 per cent on over 25 per cent profit.

President Upheld.

Bearing out the President's stand against exemptions on corporate gifts to charity, the bill made no mention of these, but the same exemptions on gifts to charitable and educationl institutions not operated for profit as now obtain on gifts and estates, were applied to the new inheritance and gift schedules.

Railrods were again extended the privilege of filing consolidated income returns, by paying a 15¾ income tax.

Hope expressed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that the revenue yield from the bill could be earmarked for retiring the public debt—by reserving a special Treasury "drawer" for the fund—was not borne out by any specific provision of the bill.

Roosevelt Gets Bill Providing Army Airports

Senate Passes Measure to Set Up Strategic Depots Throughout U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Congress yesterday completed action on the Wilcox bill giving blanket authority for the Army to construct strategic air depots throughout the Nation and its possessions.

The Senate passed and sent to the White House the measure, previously passed by the House. It has the approval of the War Department. While no appropriation is provided, Representative Wilcox (Democrat), Florida, author of the bill, has forecast the needed funds—estimated at between $110,000,000 and $120,000,000—would be forthcoming from the work relief billions.

The air depots would be used for peace time training of an expanded air force and for protection against foreign invasion.

In selecting the areas for the new stations, the department is directed to consider the following regions for the purposes named:

Atlantic northeast—To provide for training in cold weather and in fog.

Atlantic southeast and Caribbean areas—To permit training in long-range operations, especially those incident to reinforcing the Panama Canal.

Southeastern States—To provide a depot essential to the maintenance of the general headquarters air force.

Pacific northwest—To establish

Texas Farmers To File Action Against Tariff

Move Seen as Counter Suit to AAA Process Tax Injunctions.

By the Associated Press.

Launching what was described as a fight with manufacturers, H. G. Lucas, Brownwood, Tex., president of the Texas Agricultural Association, yesterday said farmers of his State would file suit to test constitutionality of protective tariffs.

Lucas conceded that the movement was in retaliation to approximately 450 suits filed by manufacturers attacking validity of AAA processing taxes from which farm benefits are paid. He insisted that he had not consulted AAA officials about his plans, and that the pending tariffs suit was inspired solely by "aroused farmers."

Meanwhile, at Chicago 18 meat-packing companies, including two of the Nation's largest, Swift & Co. and Armour & Co.—filed suits in Federal District Court to restrain further collection of processing taxes on hogs.

Although more than 440 packing houses and milling companies had sought injunctions against the tax in recent weeks, the big packers had remained out of the court litigation.

The Swift & Co. bill, attacking the constitutionality of the agricultural production act, claimed the company had paid $36,256,148 in processing and floor taxes and handed more than $2,000,000 a month to the Government. It set forth that the "artificial shortage" of hogs so decreased supplies that plants were operated below capacity, "resulting in increased unit costs of processing." An injunction against

Carroll, First NRA Employe, Now Joins Outgoing Parade

The first man sworn into NRA service, the man who, as chief clerk, organized the huge staff of more than 5,000 employes, has joined the outgoing parade.

Bradish J. Carroll, jr., serving recently as special assistant to Administrator James L. O'Neill, resigned yesterday and his resignation was accepted, effective September 1. O'Neill also has resigned to return this week to his post as vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York.

Though he made no announcement of his plans, it was considered likely that Carroll will soon be found in some executive position in another branch of the Government. It was pointed out by associates that he has ranked high with Administration officials and in the task of selecting and directing personnel for the Blue Eagle organization has maintained cordial relations with members of Congress.

Carroll, a New Yorker, first took office in the pell-mell days of June, 1933, when NRA was only a legalized dream. He was sworn in 20 minutes after President Roosevelt signed the national industrial recovery act, on June 16. Then he administered the oath to Gen. Hugh Johnson, first NRA administrator, and the long struggle over codes, price-fixing, enforcement and related subjects was under way.

Carroll indirectly brought about the famous John Donovan case that rocked NRA circles for weeks. Upon his recommendation Mrs. Nancy Luke, a stencil operator, was discharged, and Donovan, as head of NRA Local No. 91 of the American Federation of Government Employes, took up the fight in her behalf. Donovan himself was discharged by Johnson. Then came the picketing of NRA headquarters by members of the union, heated charges and denials, and finally, after mediation by Carroll, Donovan's reinstatement.

In March, 1934, Carroll was promoted by Johnson to be deputy administrator in charge of finances and pay rolls.

Since NRA was killed by Supreme Court ruling, Carroll has continued as assistant administrator.

Federal Power Project Asked At Oregon Dam

Two Republican Senators Introduce Measure for New Yardstick.

By the Associated Press.

Two Senate Republicans, with the backing of President Roosevelt, yesterday introduced a bill for starting a Government power project on the Bonneville Dam in Oregon.

The measure was introduced by Senators McNary and Steiwer, of Oregon. It would give the War Department, under guidance of the Federal Power Commission, authority to install power equipment and sell electricity to governmental and private organizations at cost plus amoritization.

"Early and favorable consideration" was asked by the President in a letter to Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, of the Commerce Committee, but Steiwer said there was little intention of seeking its passage this session.

While not intended to parallel the Tennessee Valley power development, Steiwer said the Bonneville project may "incidentally" act as a "yardstick" for measuring power charges in the country, but he termed it an "unfair" yardstick because the site is the "most favorable in the world."

Steiwer said the Bonneville project, inaugurated more than a year ago to improve navigation on the Columbia above Portland, will be completed in about two years.

In his letter on the bill, the President said:

"Senator McNary has introduced a bill authorizing the completion, maintenance and operation of certain navigation facilities on the Columbia River, now under construction, known as the Bonneville Dam.

"The bill has been considered by the Chief of Engineers, the Federal Power Commission and the Attorney General. All agree that the proposed legislation is desirable and necessary to the development of the project.

"In view of this I concur. May I ask that your committee give early and favorable consideration to the bill."

Ontario Kidnaping Laid to Detroiter

Knowles, Gangster, Last of Six in Labatt Case.

By the Associated Press.

London, Ontario, July 29.—Ontario police authorities today permitted what seemed to be the last important secret of the Labatt kidnap quest to escape from its official hiding place by announcing that Russell Knowles, Detroit gangster, was the sixth and last man sought as a member of the abduction gang.

Knowles and another Detroit man, Albert Pegram,it was said, are the only two not in custody.

Announcement that Knowles, alias Russell Rogers, was missed by only 30 minutes when police went to his Detroit home to arrest him last Tuesday was followed by the laying of a kidnaping charge against him in court here. The warrant was sworn before County Treasurer John McLarty.

John S. Labatt, wealthy London brewer, was kidnaped and held three days for $150,000 ransom last August, then released without any ransom payment.

Trade Reports and G. O. P. Complaints; Oh, Death Sentence, Where Is Thy Sting?

By Raymond Clapper

They tell us that Roosevelt, the insidious Communist, is deliberately prolonging the depression. His reckless legislation is ruining the country. He has us hopelessly in debt. Business men are persecuted, harassed, afraid to make a move. Roosevelt has them down, with his hands at their throats, and he won't let them get up. Things never will be right until he is thrown out, and along with him his dictatorship and regimentation and Wallace, the farm belt Herod, who ordered the killing of those little pigs in cold blood. Then, and only then, will man and pig have back their constitutional guaranties of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

By the time you have read back to the financial pages, your flesh is creeping and you wonder how it happens that you are still spared from these horrendous things.

If you glance at those business columns of dull statistics, reports to stockholders, trade reports, market tables, you will be able to discern what is happening under this oppressive regime of the camouflaged socialistic dictatorship. Automobile production is higher than in 1928, two and a half times as high as in 1932. Obviously the country is determined to ride, not walk, to the dogs . . . Bank clearings for the country are a fourth higher than last year and in New York City they are up almost a third . . . Building contracts are up almost 20 per cent above last year . . . On the West Coast, the Pacific Lighting Co. walks merrily into the jaws of the death sentence with current earnings of $4.05 a share instead of the $2.27 of last year . . . From Minnesota, where the United States Supreme Court let them have a farm moratorium, the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. reports that among 10,000 of its policyholders, the average mortgage load has gone down 10 per cent in two years and the average wealth of the families has gone up 16 per cent . . . Power production—oh, death sentence, where is thy sting?—passes the 1929 all-time peak . . . Steel is doing better than the summer average . . . Plate mills hit 85 per cent capacity . . . Heavy industry is cheering for the first time in years.

It is all very confusing. One feels as bewildered as a pup with a flea on each ear.

When former Representative Charles West, of Ohio, who won his real fame as the White House decoy around Congress, was appointed Undersecretary of Interior the other day, the whisper went around that he was being put in there for a reason. His job, it was hinted, was to grease down the irascible temper which Secretary Ickes has shown lately, and also to break up the Ickes-Burlew alliance under which Ebert K. Burlew, administrative assistant and budget officer and holdover from the Hoover Administration, was supposed to be really running the show, and not entirely to the satisfaction of the White House and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Whether it is true or not, Secretary Ickes took no chances. He found that the best suite of offices for Undersecretary West was away down on the second floor, far from the upper-floor throne room of the Secretary. West is tall, has very large ears and eyes as black and sharp as the buttons on grandfather's Sunday shoes. Even with this ideal equipment, he will never be able to see and hear half that is going on around headquarters upstairs.

The only departmental official who was ever known to complain about being located too close to the throne was a Farley patronage man. He was placed in one of the departments to spot worthy Democrats in good jobs and he was not welcome to the Cabinet officer, who wanted to run his own department. So the wily chief put the political intruder next door to him and had a habit of bursting through the door at the most unexpected times. He kept such close watch that the patronage rustler's work was seriously hampered.

Gov. Benjamin B. Moeur of Arizona, in from the cactus roots, ruminates: "I'm just a country boy . . . a doctor . . . born in Tennessee, lived on corn bread most of my life, slept on a cornshuck bed . . . I don't know much about anything . . . we are just trying to get along out in Arizona . . . I cut appropriations 31 per cent . . . all of our institutions are in the black . . . hasn't been a bank failure since I took office in January, 1933, and I beat the President to closing the banks . . . Federal money is helping our business conditions some, but we still have 22 per cent of our people on relief . . . Arizona has a bonded indebtedness of only $250,000, plus $730,000 in old county bonds which we had to take over when we were admitted to Statehood. These were refinanced recently at a reduction of one-half per cent interest . . . We owe the good condition of our State finances to the sales tax . . . I told the President today he ought to have one He didn't say anything . . . Of course a sales tax is unpopular. I never heard of a tax that wasn't. But it brings in the money . . . Roosevelt it just about as popular in Arizona as he ever was. Hasn't slipped out there . . . I don't agree with everything he does and I don't like some of the people he appointed. But I give him the benefit of the doubt. He'd make mistakes even if he were perfect. Christ was the perfect Man, but a good many people didn't like Him. He picked 12 disciples and three double-crossed Him. You can't expect any President to average any higher than that . . . And I don't like some of these Congressmen, saying that he is pulling chestnuts out for the British and all that sort of stuff. On foreign matters stand by the President . . . The Constitution? We want to see a liberal interpretation of it so that the Government can deal with emergencies. But we want our State's rights. You won't find Arizona or any other State giving up its rights . . . I'm not going to let any Communists stay loose around Arizona. I got some of them in jail now. Some things about socialism are all right—I don't mean everything, but some things. I'm not going to give up what I earn, but we have to give people a chance. But I hate a Communist like a rattlesnake . . . Out in my country we don't pay any attention to these alphabet boys who figure out on paper how you can make a million dollars raising doodle bugs to feed the chickens. You got to be practical."

Somebody, getting up a book of biographical sketches, gives President Roosevelt 80 words, Babe Ruth 75 words, and Hoover 1,300. That is a good joke, but it happens to be on the publishers. Has anyone ever waded through 1,300 words about Buchanan, or stopped at 80 about Lincoln? Even a Southerner?

State Mine Chief Jailed After Blast

Inspector Is Charged With Murder in Death of 9.

By the Associated Press.

Paintsville, Ky., July 29.—Jailed on a murder charge in connection with the death of nine men in a blast, State Mining Department Chief John S. Daniel late today declared the proceedings "the most unherd-of in the history of mining" and called it "a plot to embarrass me."

Indications were that Dniel would be in jail until his preliminary hearing tomorrow, when bail might be fixed. He and his attorney conferred with County Judge H. B. Conley, trying to arrnge bond before then.

Daniel cme to Van Lear, Ky., today to continue inquiry into an explosion which killed nine men a few days ago. The warrant, charging murder and neglect of duty, was sworn to by John Mollett, Van Lear miner and secretary of the United Mine Workers of America local.

Daniel started proceedings immediately to be released. R. C. Thomas, of the Northeast Coal Co.; Hary La Viers, of the Southeast Coal Co., and officials of the Consolidated Coal Co., in whose mine the explosion took plase, helped Daniel.

Cost Limit Set At Half-Billion On State Works

Reported Administration Steps Cut Non-Federal Fund 400 Millions.

By the Associated Press.

A $500,000,000 limit yesterday was reported clamped by the Administration on work-relief funds available for State and local public works.

If carried out as disclosed by high officials, the program would represent a $400,000,000 slash in the $900,000,00 originally contemplated for non-Federal PWA projects.

The tentative decision coincided with an announcement by Secretary Ickes that $501,114,249 in local applications had been filed with State PWA directors. Of this total, $58,282,672 had been approved and forwarded to Washington.

Seriously threatened by the large sume required for materials, the PWA program was rescued in part by President Roosevelt's decision to supply only 45 per cent of total expenditures from the works relief appropriation, leaving the remaining 55 per cent to be borrowed.

Double Construction.

On a 45 per cent basis, each $959 supplies a year-long job. The $500,000,000 which would be donated was said by officials to mean construction of more than double that amount of projects.

With $250,000,000 for spending on low-cost housing projects, Ickes will have only $750,000,000 for the two programs, a reduction of $1,000,000,000 from the sum originally expected.

Frequently criticized for the delay in spending PWA funds, Ickes said yesterday $1,500,000,000 had been spent under the two-year-old program and urged States and communities to file applications "with all possible speed."

He added that the assignment of most projects costing $25,000 or more to PWA instead of to Harry L. Hopkins' PWA had brought a "sharp acceleration" in applications during recent months.

A recent sale of securities to the RFC supplied PWA with more than $250,000,000 for loans on non-Federal projects. Because of the limited supply of funds, however, the PWA interest rate recently was boosted to 4 per cent to induce cities to borrow from private sources where possible.

Now however, Ickes is considering reducing that rate in individual cases where rates offered by private bankers are considered too high.

Later, Mr. Roosevelt allotted $664,566 of work relief funds as 45 per cent donations on 20 non-Federal PWA propects in a number of States. A number of the applicants also requested loans from the PWA revolving fund.

To Revise Wage Areas.

The President at the same time authorized Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, to revise boundaries of areas by which the $19 to $94 a month wage is determined to "permit the ironing out of inequalities since the regulations were set up."

Hopkins' wage regulations set up varying pay levels for five different areas, with highest rates in the Northeast and lowest in the deep South. Officials insisted the action was not prompted by protests of the American Federation of Labor against slashes in the prevailing wage rate, but was to adjust what they termed a few "isolated" cases of inequality.

"A case in point," said an official announcement, "is Cincinnati, Ohio, and Newport, Ky. A bridge connects the two. Newport is part of the Cincinnati industrial area and the wage rates that have been paid in the larger city have been paid in the smaller one.

"In the original order (fixed wage levels), Ohio is placed in area No. 1 and Kentucky in area No. 3. Under it unskilled labor at the Cincinnati end of the bridge would receive $55 a month; those at the Newport end, $29, with like differentials for intermediate and skilled help."

LaGuardia Shuns Further Dispute

Shies at Aiding Chorus Girls England Bars.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—While reverberations from the celebrated "l'affaire Kress" showed no signs of diminishing, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia gingerly steered clear today of further international complications by refusing the suggestion of coming to the aid of Broadway chorus girls ruled out of England.

"Don't you think I am in sufficient international complications now?" he asked, referring to his refusal to issue a city license to a German immigrant.

"Anyway, we barred the countess some time ago—maybe this evens it up," he added, referring apparently to Vera, Countess Cathcart, whose entry to the United States was held up because of alleged "moral turpitude."

Veterans' Aid Bill Passed in Senate

By the Associated Press.

The Harrison bill to extend for five years from January 2 last the time in which applications may be made for benefits of the World War adjusted compensation act was passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House.

The measure, which has the approval of the Veterans Administration, also would extend to men discharged from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard who receive pensions for service-connected disabilities, the provisions of existing law providing hospitalization and domiciliary care.

The Senate also passed and returned to the House for action on amendments a bill which would give the Veterans Administration wider powers to protect the estates of veterans where the pensions or other benefits are made to guardians, curators or conservators.

'Insiders' Got Utility Profits Of $2,800,000, Inquiry Hears

"It is as far-fetched to say that the expenses incurred in opposing the passage of the Wheeler-Rayburn bills are paid for by the consumer," said the statement, distributed later to the press, "as to say that a Senator's automobile, apartment, food or clothing was paid for by the taxpayers of this country just because his salary was his sole source of income."

The House Rules Committee, also investigating lobbying on the utilities bill, prepared to resume its inquiries today. William Collins, committee counsel, intimated that there would be important disclosures as the result of an examination of the books of the B. B. Robinson Investment Co., a Chicago house.

Evidence on profits received by Hopson and his close associates through privately owned companies performing services for A. G. E.'s subsidiaries was added to the record with Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, reading from the Federal Trade Commission investigation of A. G. E., and S. C. Ross, former counsel for the New York State joint legislative committee for the investigation of public utilities, testifying.

Tells of Profits.

Ross, who said his sources were the books of firms which did accounting and auditing work for A. G. E. companies, testified in answer to Schwellenbach's questions that such payments to Hopson's companies totaled $2,805,000 for the five years from 1929 to 1934, inclusive.

"So Hopson and his associates have taken an average of $570,000 a year from the A. G. E. system?" Schwellenbach asked.

The witness agreed.

"Those were the actual profits of the Hopson private companies?"

"Yes, sir."

Schwellenbach then read from a financial source book that dividend payments on numerous issues of A. G. E. and its affiliated companies began slowing in 1931 and stopped completely in 1932.

Ross also testified that a "burden" of $8,500,000 in fees was placed upon the operating companies. He said those directing such companies were powerless to say whether the services involved should be rendered or how much should be paid.

Offices Moved.

The private companies, Ross said, could be brought under the supervision of State regulatory bodies only with great difficulty. They claimed they were not public utilities, he added, and in replies to questions said the Hopson companies transferred their offices from New York city to Newark, N. J., after the State Legislature had ordered an investigation.

Three committee investigators then testified to their inability to serve Hopson with a summons for his appearance before the committee. A succession of officers or employes of A. G. E. or associated companies denied any knowledge of his whereabouts or that they had seen him for periods ranging from eight days to eight months.

One investigator, Joseph P. McCarthy, testified that office files showed Hopson's last visit there was on July 8 when he sent a telegram to William Randolph Hearst saying he had been advised the utilities bill would pass the House the following day and asking that he "use every influence to avoid this breaking down of the Constitution."

Money Spent on Ads.

Promptly, committee members asked whether any papers on payments to Hearst papers for advertising had been found and McCarthy said that office records showed $23,311 for advertisements opposing the bill paid to 23 Hearst papers since March 4.

Estes addressed the committee at the outset of the session, but was not permitted to take the stand until later. Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, denied him permission to issue a prepared statement or to ask a question himself. Black produced his telegraphic request for permission to appear and said his purpose was to say whether he had received payment for a radio speech against the utilities bill.

"Did you receive any compensation from Texas Power & Light?"

"I did not."

He testified that he was the owner of East Texas Oil, a magazine, and two daily newspapers in Longview. The magazine, he said, has a contract with Texas Power & Light for a back page advertisement, from which it has received $225 every month since the magazine was launched in May, 1934.

"I'll take advertising from any honest man," Estes said.

He was asked about Peter Molyneaux who, the record says, received $192 from Texas Power & Light for a radio speech against the bill. He publishes a weekly magazine in Texas.

Denies Affiliation.

"Mr. Molyneaux runs one kind of paper and I run another," Estes replied. "My papers are a news medium and an advertising medium. His are——" He did not complete the statement.

"There is no connection between us," he added. "That's what made me so mad"—referring to testimony last week which inferentially associated the two.

Texas Farmers To File Action Against Tariff

collection of $804,686 in May taxes was sought.

In Denver the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday criticized the Government for collecting AAA processing taxes while constitutionality of the act is being questioned.

Circuit Judges Orie L. Phillips and Robert E. Lewis overruled the decision of United States District Judge J. Foster Symes, who last week declined an injunction to prevent collection of $185,000 in processing taxes from the Colorado Milling & Elevator Co. They ordered the money impounded until constitutionality of the AAA tax is determined by the United States Supreme Court.

Judges Lewis and Phillips both said the Government's policy of collecting taxes and then forcing taxpayers to sue to recover, pending a Supreme Court decision, is unfair.

A meeting of directors of the Texas Agricultural Association will be held at Bryan, Tex., Friday, Lucas said, when final plans will be made for the test tariff suit. The tariffs on goods that farmers buy will be contested, he added, on the grounds that they are special levies for the benefit of one class and that they are not revenue measures.

Farmers of other States will be invited to join the movement, Lucas said, adding he had received indications that assistance will be forthcoming from Louisiana, Mississippi, Iowa, Alabama and Oklahoma.

"We have been paying tariff benefits a long time," Lucas said, "and we do not object to the tariffs as such. But we believe we are entitled to as much protection as the manufacturers. The processing tax on a shirt we wear is 3 cents, and the protective tariff 37 cents. We do not object to paying the processing taxes."

Lucas, with a group of Southern farmers, was in the capital conferring with AAA officials concerning operation of the Bankhead law. Prominent in the group was C. H. Day, Texas cotton planter who led the "farmers' march" on Washington to boost the AAA, several months ago.

W. H. Stovall, cotton planter of Stovall, Miss., pledged assistance of farmers of his State.

A resolution directing the Federal Trade Commision to make a Nationwide investigation of agricultural incomes and profits of middlemen handling farm products was given legislative right of way yesterday by the House Rules Committee.

The resolution provides $150,000 expenses and instructions to report back at the next session of Congress. The Senate already has adopted the resolution.

Groups Indorse Bill to Tighten Food, Drug Law

Publishers and Advertisers Favor Measure in House Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Publishers and advertising concerns joined yesterday in indorsing the Senate-approved bill tightening up the country's food and drug laws.

"A matured bill that adequately protects the public," was the approval given the measure before a House Interstate Commerce subcommitte by Charles Parlin, of the National Publishers Association.

The measure gives the Secretary of Agriculture broader authority to control advertising of food and drug products that are determined to be harmful, and adds cosmetics to the province of food and drug control.

Parlin told the committee that his organization had a number of amendments to the original Tugwell bill, but that as it was rewritten "we haven't any changes."

"Publication depends on the confidence of the reader," he said, "and we yield to no one as a spokesman for the consumer."

Chairman Chapman (Democrat), Kentucky, announced spokesmen for the National Editorial Association had informed him that organization wanted to see the Senate bill passed.

Saying he spoke for 115 agencies doing two-thirds of the country's advertising business, John Benson, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, New York, expressed his "hearty approval of legislation this session to give the consumer of foods, drugs and cosmetics more adequate protection than the present law."

Asked if he thought there would be conflict between the broadened advertising stipulations of the food and drug act and the Federal Trade Commission's campaign against false advertising, Benson said the commission's actions were based on unfair trade practices and therefore limited, although it had done "a reasonably good job, if a little slow."

Senator Demands Neutrality Action

Clark, of Missouri, Sees New Danger of War.

By the Associated Press.

Another demand for action this session on neutrality legislation was voiced yesterday by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, in a statement saying such measures cause the "must" program to "pale into insignificance."

"If Congress should adjourn without taking action," said the Missourian, co-author with Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, of a batch of neutrality bills, "and a general war should break out abroad during the recess, our Government would be as helpless in keeping us out of war as was President Wilson after the sailing of the first munition ship during the World War.

"Our feet will then be irrevocably set on the path which leads to war.

"The proponents of such legislation intend to press for action at this session."

"Dodge certainly stole the spotlight when it showed it could get 20 miles or more per gallon of gas." This tribute to the new Dodge was paid by Boris Karloff, star of the Columbia picture, "The Black Room."

Thousands of Dodge owners—driving a total of more than a million miles a day—get 18 to 22 miles per gallon of gas. They say it actually costs less to own a big Dodge than small cars of competitive make—that their gas, oil and upkeep savings wipe out the slight difference in first cost.

And remember Dodge also gives you the only "Airglide Ride"... patented Floating Power engine mountings... genuine hydraulic brakes and the Dodge safety all-steel body. You get all this for only a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars. List price now only $645 and up at factory, Detroit.

Insanity Plea Hope of Youth Who Slew Girl

Mother Will Testify for Peoria Boy on Trial in Hostess' Death.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 29.—Gerald Thompson was branded insane today as his counsel launched an attempt to save him from the electric chair for the killing of Mildred Hallmark.

"The defendant is morally insane," Defense Attorney Ren Thurman argued in a brief opening statement after the prosecution had abruptly rested its case.

He promised to bring Thompson's mother, Mrs. Florence Whiteside, from a hospital to assume the role of star witness in her son's behalf.

"She will lay bare her soul before you jurors in an effort to save her boy," he declared. "She will tell all."

Married at 14.

Thurman told of her marriage at 14 to a man he described as a "psychopathic case" and added:

"Two children were born, Gerald, the defendant, and Victor. They are insane. Victor is now in the county jail awaiting trial on charges of taking liberties with an 8-year-old boy.

"The insanity which has run in this family—the father, and two sons—is a legal defense against the charges brought by the State."

Thompson, unabashed by the stares of the largest turnout of spectators and unmoved by the mention of his mother's name, paid indifferent heed to the proceedings.

Early Decision Due.

It became apparent that the "grandma's boy" would learn his fate within the next few days. Thurman, surprised by the quick termination of the State's evidence, was not prepared to call his witnesses, so court was adjourned until tomorrow.

State's Attorney Edwin V. Champion put several witneses on the stand to confirm portions of Thompson's confession that he slugged, choked and attacked the comely cafe hostess the night of June 16 in Springdale Cemetery.

Although Thompson's mother, recuperating from a nervous breakdown in a hospital, was listed as his principal witness, the accused youth had resided with his grandmother. Hence, some Peorians dubbed him a "grandma's boy."

Scissors Evidence.

Chief of Police Fred Nussbaum, Detective Charles Welty and Eugene Cavanaugh, investigator on the prosecutor's staff, testified that a pair of scissors had been found in the defendant's car. They did not link the shears to the assault of Miss Hallmark.

The scissors were admitted to evidence over Thurman's objections.

Sanitarium Fire Routs Occupants

Fire routed the occupants of a dormitory at the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park, Md., yesterday afternoon.

The blaze started in the apartment of Dr. Edna Patterson, a staff physician, supposedly from an overheated electric iron. It spread to the sleeping porches that encircle the building, damaging those on the first and secnd floors.

The building proper also was damaged before the fire departments from Takoma Park and Silver Spring got the fire under control.

About 25 women, staff officers and office workers, live in the dormitory. When the fire broke out, most of these were at work. The clothing and effects of several were destroyed.

A 75-year-old woman was critically burned yesterday when her clothing was ignited by a trash fire in the rear of her home, 5026 Fifth street northwest.

The woman, Mrs. Augusta Yeatman, went into the yard to tend the fire, her nurse, Mary Tucker, told the police. She said Mrs. Yeatman had only been in the yard a short time when she heard her scream. Running out, she stated, she found Mrs. Yeatman totally enveloped in flames.

Mrs. Yeatman was treated at Casualty Hospital for third degree burns to her body. She is not expected to live.

Torso Murder Suspect Faces Her Accuser

Mrs. Dunkel Identifies Woman She Claims Killed Lang.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 29.—Mrs. Blanche Dunkel tonight identified Mrs. Evelyn Smith, rushed from New York by airplane, as the woman she had accused of the torso slaying of Ervin Lang.

The identification was made in the presence of Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the State's attorney, and Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty when the women were brought together for a brief but dramatic meeting.

"Yes, that's the woman I've been talking about," Mrs. Dunkel, 43-year-old mother-in-law of the victim, said as she faced Mrs. Smith in the anteroom of Capt. Gilbert's office.

Mrs. Smith uttered no word as her accuser was led away to the office of Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley.

Mrs. Dunkel, earlier in the investigation, had been quoted by investigators as saying she had paid Mrs. Smith, a faded blonde of 43, $100 for slaying Lang. Lang, 29-year-old grocer's helper, was drugged and strangled last July 6. His body was dismembered. His torso was found July 9 in a swamp near Hammond, Ind. A taut rope was drawn about the neck and the body was wrapped in a blanket. Several days later his legs were found in a trunk.

Reno, Nev., July 29 (AP).—Jack Kirkland, playwright and former husband of Nancy Carroll, actress, was divorced here today by Mrs. Jayne Shadduck Kirkland. She charged cruelty.

They were married March 23, 1934, in Jersey City, N. J.

Mrs. Kirkland won an interlocutory divorce from Kirkland in Los Angeles last February. It was understood she sought the final decree in Reno in order to be married later this year to Henry Topping, jr., New York socialite.

Miss Carroll is now here to divorce her present husband, Thomas Bolton Mallory, former magazine editor.

Kirkland is the author of "Tobacco Road" and other noted stage successes.

Inquest Held, Story of Slaying Written by Wife

Son by First Marriage Center of Quarrel, She States.

Hundreds of persons thronged the vicinity of the little stone police court in Laurel, Md., last night as the inquest into the death by shooting of former State Patrolman Wade LeRoy Smith opened.

Acting Coroner James J. Vawter, Laurel justicee of the peace, presided as 12 jurymen heard police officers and relatives of Mrs. Smith, who is said by police to have confessed firing the fatal shot, tell their story of the tragedy which has rocked Prince Georges County.

The little courtroom was filled to overflowing. Men and women crowded the corridors outside and in the street and the overflow crowd tried to jostle its way into the building. Special police were called to untangle traffic.

Those who were on hand to testify included Mrs. Smith, who had spent the day in seclusion following her release yesterday on $2,000 bail.

Another was Carroll Harrison, brother-in-law of the pretty blue-eyed, twice-married brunette who fled to his home after the shooting and prior to her surrender at the Laurel sub-police station several hours after her husband had died on the bedroom floor of their home.

Her Story Backed.

Harrison told in detail a story closely resembling that which Mrs. Smith is alleged to have told the police.

Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the Prince Georges County Police, said she gave the following written but unsigned statement to him:

"In company with four other persons, my husband and I went to the Jessups Volunteer Fire Department's carnival Saturday night. As was our custom, we left my son with his grandmother, Mrs. Vincent Greco.

"We were lucky and won a set of dishes at the carnival. Wade and I had our picture taken together. It was not a very good photo and we all laughed over it. We shared the front seat of the automobile with another couple on the way home. I sat in my husband's lap. We were all laughing and joking and very happy.

"We got out at our home, unpacked the dishes and then drove off in our own car to get something to eat. We went to an inn on the boulevard just across the Howard County line.

"My husband stopped at the door to talk with an acquaintance. I went inside, saw some friends, and showed them the picture taken at the carnival. They laughed at it and passed it around.

Bought Beer.

"Just as Wade came inside, an Italian employed by Nuncy Greco, my first husband, who runs a barber shop in Laurel, was laughing at the picture. Wade said he did not like 'Wops' laughing at his picture. I laughed it off and we had some beer and crab cakes.

"When we got home and in bed, Wade began arguing again about the picture and the 'Wops.' I resented his remarks because my son is half Italian. He kept getting madder all the time and finally said he was going to leave home.

"He got up and put on his trousers and a shirt. I saw him go to the bureau and put the revolver in his hip pocket. He started out, but changed his mind, came back, and said:

"'This is my house, you get out'."

He threw a dress at me. I got up and started putting on my stockings. He kept shouting and grabbing me. There are bruises on my arms and legs. Finally I decided it would be silly for me to leave and told him I was going to stay.

"He went out in the kitchen. I started praying aloud for my boy and my husband, and said I did not want to live if they could not be friendly, like they usually are.

Slaying Investigated

WADE L. SMITH.

Wade heard me and came rushing in with the pistol in his hand.

"I'll Kill You."

"He said, 'So you want to die! All right, I'll kill you!'

"He went over to the bureau and started fumbling with the gun with his back turned. Changing his mind, he turned and shouted, 'No, you kill yourself! I won't hang for you!'

"Then he put the gun in my hands. He turned as if to leave. Then he suddenly whirled back and shouted. 'No, I'll do it my way.' Then he came at me as if to choke me. The shot followed."

Funeral services for Smith will be held at 2 o'clock today at Cumberland. Pall bearers for the slain man will be his former fellow State patrolmen.

New Deal's Tax Program Hit By 'Minute Women' in Boston

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Mass., July 29.—Charges of "taxation without representation," "confiscation" and "unwarranted waste," rang in the old South Meeting House this afternoon when women of Boston and Massachusetts assembled to protest publicly against President Roosevelt's wealth-distribution tax program.

In the old hall, where 162 years ago the Boston Tea Party was planned, the Massachusetts Minute Women of 1936, headed by Miss Margaret McGill, listened to the historic speech of Josiah Quincy, delivered by Theodore R. Goodwin, of Winchester, in colonial costume.

After a short "tea party" exercise at 2:30, the group paraded to the State House in buggies and automobiles, bearing protests against the present tax system and the proposed bill. Mrs. J. Harter Blaisdell, Winchester Women's Club leader, read a petition, which was presented to Gov. Curley, which said in part:

"We, free citizens of a free nation, jealous of the heritage bequeathed to us by our forefathers, view with concern the encroachment of the Federal Government upon the rights and liberties guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States. We view with concern the unwarranted waste of the savings of the thrifty upon unsound experiments, which are not bringing relief or prosperity to the Nation, but which are breaking down the moral fiber of the American people and are piling up debts it will take generations to pay.

"We proclaim our demand for economy in government and a balanced budget as measures to obviate excessive and oppressive taxation, and as the only road to prosperity for all our people.

"We call upon His Excellency, the Governor of Massachusetts to transmit this petition to the President of the United States, that the rights and liberties of all the people may be protected."

C.M.Malone,53, Dies; Foretold Event in Letter

Services to Be Held Today for Former Frederick Athlete.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., July 29.—True to his prediction of last February, Clarence Michael Malone, 53, former local athlete and jeweler, was dead today after a ten-year battle against tuberculosis.

Mr. Malone, popularly known as "Cy," wrote in a letter from the Springfield State Hospital at Sykesville six month ago that he would die in a short time. He succumbed yesterday.

While attending Rock Hill College in his youth, he gained renown at baseball. He also was credited with running the 100-yard dash in 9 seconds. He competed in many field events and played half back and end in football.

Born in Baltimore, he came here in 1908 to play with the Frederick team in the old Sunset League. After a breakdown in health he returned to the team in 1910.

After selling insurance here and entering the jewelry business of his father-in-law, the late H. S. Landis, he returned to Baltimore to sell insurance for a short time before going to the State hospital.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Amy Landis Malone, of Emmitsburg; his father, James R. Malone; three daughters, Mrs. Clarence Merriman, of Knoxville; Mrs. Chauncey Cramer, of Frederick, and Martha, at home, and two sons, Paul S. and Richard G. Malone, at home.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow with low mass in St. John's Catholic Church here. Burial will be in St. John's Cemetery.

This schedule contrasted with an earlier tentative decision of committee Democrats to impose new rates on incomes only as low as $150,000. In an earlier draft, the 75 per cent maximum draft would have applied only to incomes of over $10,000,000. In 1933 there was only one individual income in the latter category. So, in answer to criticism on this point, the committee in its redrafted surtax schedule, began the maximum 75 per cent levy with incomes of over $5,000,000.

King Demands Speedy Action On Nazi Probe

Threatens to Carry Move for Persecution Inquiry to Senate Floor.

By the Associated Press.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, said last night he had requested action "within a very few days" on his resolution demanding an investigation of reports of religious persecution in Germany.

He added that unless the Foreign Relations Committee, to which his resolution was referred, grants a hearing he will take the issue to the floor of the Senate.

"I have found much support in the Senate," he said, "and have received more than 200 telegrams backing the resolution."

It was understood that the resolution now is being studied by the State Department, which customarily would report back to the Foreign Relations Committee.

State Department officials, meanwhile, continued their silence on all phases of German-American relations, including demands of the German press for an apology because demonstrators ripped a flag from a steamer in New York.

The German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, is in Germany and is not expected back until August 9. He was expected to land in New York a week earlier, but was delayed in sailing by further conferences with Nazi officials.

The Ambassador went to Berlin in connection with the possible negotiation of a German-American reciprocal trade pact, and is expected to return with an answer to the American proposal to conclude an agreement on the basis of "equality of treatment."

State Department officials said there has been no further correspondence with New York City officials concerning Mayor LaGuardia's refusal to grant a masseur's permit to a German alien because of alleged violation by Germany of the German-American commercial treaty.

300 Subpenaed In Ouster Trial

Richards Case Resumes Today in Cecil County.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 29.—Approximately 300 residents of Cecil County were under subpena today to testify in the circuit court action of the Board of County Commissioners to retain Joseph T. Richards as county roads engineer.

Half of these are witnesses for the commissioners and half for the State Roads Commission. They are to be in court tomorrow when it reconvenes after a week-end recess. About 50 witnesses were heard last week.

Richards was discharged by the roads commission on the grounds of economy. The county commissioners claimed it was a political move and instituted the action to keep him at the post.

Clothes Set Afire, Man Badly Burned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 29.—After having been set on fire and laying for two days helpless in the woods, Matt Goens, 38, of near Grottoes, is in a serious condition at the home of his brother-in-law, Dan Rannells, in East Rockingham. Officers were told that while Goens was asleep Friday at his home in the Black Rock Spring region, in the Blue Ridge mountains, his clothes were saturated with kerosene and a match applied.

Goens started to a neighbor's home to summon medical aid after removing the blazing clothing, but collapsed in a nearby woods and was not found until last night. Officers say Goens plans to prefer charges against the person he believes responsible for the act.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

for declaring in his pulpit that "human life is worthless in the new Germany." The incident was added to the record being kept by Cardinal Bertram, of Breslau, to be shown at the conference of Catholic bishops at Fulda August 16.

Cardinal Bertram's own diocese will have read to them Pope Pius' remarks on Germany, published in the Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper. The Pope's observations have been read to the Berlin diocese.

A further step against "political Catholicism" was noted in Baden, where the property of three Catholic organizations dissolved in 1933 was seized by the State.

The attitude of the Jews remained tense. Leaders of Jewish congregations in Berlin received official notice that they should discourage Jews from patronizing cafes and restaurants and from appearing in too great numbers in the streets.

Fear is also expressed in Jewish circles that the decree of Count von Helldorf, Berlin police chief, curbing individual acts of terrorism—as distinct from the Nazis' longer opposition—"has a dark significance."

Scandal Promised.

An editor was dismissed for treating a report about the intimate relations between a Jew and an Aryan girl "in a way that was distasteful," but Streicher's Stuermer has announced a special edition promising a sensational expose of the same character—described in the announcement as involving Albert Hirschland, leader of a girls' school, accused of relations with 100 Aryan girls.

In Munich a search was made for persons who distributed sheets purporting to be a Communists' appeal to Catholics to join in a fight for the freedom of the church.

At Quedlinburg the Lord Mayor decreed "Jews are not permitted to enter Cathedral Castle Museum, since German cultural heritages are not understood by Jews."

From Munich, Brunswich and Magdeburg have come reports that a number of Jews have been taken into "protective custody" for criminal attacks on Aryan girls.

Warsaw, July 29.—Feeling ran high here today when dispatches reported a Polish victim of the German Nazi campaign against "racial insults."

State troopers at Beuthen, Germany, reportedly raided a barber shop, captured the Polish manicurist, Lotte Feingraeber, who was engaged to marry a Jew, Posener, and subjected her to indignities.

"I prostituted myself with a Jew."

League Group In Stalemate Over Ethiopia

Committee on Restraint of Treaty Repudiators Is Adjourned.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 29.—A stalemate followed by adjournment of the League of Nations' special committee on restraint for treaty repudiators brought further confusion today to representatives of powers which hope to receive Italian and Ethiopian differences.

Almost on the eve of the meeting of the council to discuss the African situation, which involves several treaties, the special committee failed to reacn an agreement and halted its deliberations for several months.

The action was regarded in league circles as most significant.

The committee of 13 members was created as a consequence of Germany's repudiation of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty, but it was considering generally the subject of applying restraining measures to treaty violators.

Recess for Months.

A sub-committee had found that offending nations might be deprived of war materials and products essential to their manufacture. It also suggested they be deprived of financial credits.

These recommendations came to the full committee, but it failed either to register approval or disapproval and adjourned to meet several months hence.

This development started a new wave of speculation in quarters already speculating on the probable success of the diplomatic maneuvering of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who has accused Italy of violating treaties and is known to desire that the league name Italy the aggressor in the African trouble.

The "King of Kings" had the right to invoke, under article 15, of the league covenant, a complete investigation of the Ualual incident, which is the kernel in the nut. But he did not demand it. That was taken to be a concession which would insure council action with Italy represented.

Ethiopia Demands Action.

But the ruler of Africa's empire, in his latest communication with the league, makes it plain he expects the council to revive the mission of conciliation and arbitration and instruct it to go to the bottom of the dispute.

The emperor asks specifically "an interpretation of the mission of conciliation and arbitration." He says pointedly "it rests with the council of the League of Nations to decide between the respective contentions of the two groups of arbitrators."

(In another note, handed by Ethiopia's foreign minister, Bellaten Fueta Herouy, to the Italian minister at Addis Ababa today, the emperor's government made this plain. It said it will not consider resumption of arbitration for a partial discussion of the dispute.)

These tactics were said, in league circles, to be a maneuver which might place Benito Mussolini, Italy's premier, in an awkward doplomatic position. If the council reorders the conciliation commission to its task and instructs it to go into such matters as an answer to the question, "Who wons Ualual?" a subject which Italians would not discuss at its short-lived session in Scheveningen, the Netherlands, Mussolini might find himself in the position of opposing the league.

And if the commission, after going into such subjects, makes a recommendation which the council approves unanimously, any nation defying it would be pronounced an aggressor.

(London dispatches said a large group of foreign office experts will accompany Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs, to Geneva, and that Eden proposes to meet both Premier Laval of France and the Italian delegate to the league, Baron Pompeo Aloisi, before the session. Eden, an authoritative source disclosed, has been instructed to make a personal appeal to Aloisi for an alteration of Italy's attitude.)

"Scuffle Over Water Hole."

(The British delegation is ready to go into all subjects related to the controversy, it was said, including slave trade, arms shipments, boundaries and what happened at Ualual, last December, an affair which has been described at London as a "wretched scuffle about a desert water hole.")

(Premier Mussolini celebrated his fifty-second birthday by ordering seven experts, headed by Aloisi, to Geneva. Dispatches from Rome said the delegation had only general instructions but that a government spokesman said its mission would prove Italy wishes to remain within the framework of the league and that it could be expected to contend that council discussions be limited strictly to rehabilitation of the conciliation commission.)

Public Protests Spread Against Allies of Calles

Manifestations Staged in Nuevo Leon, Tabasco, Tamaulipas; Sonora.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, July 29.—Four states tonight witnessed the spread of movements aimed against political allies of Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, sr., the man whose word for years was the political law of Mexico.

Public manifestations were seen in the States of Nuevo Leon, Tabasco, Tamaulipas, and even in Sonora, the "iron man's" home state.

Almost as significant as these demonstrations, in the eyes of political observers in the capital, was the fact that Plutarco Elias Calles, jr., son of the former president, had been defeated 10 to 1 in his condidacy for the governorship of Nuevo Leon. Gen. Fortunato Zuazua won the poll.

In Herosillo, the capital of Sonora, several thousand persons paraded as a protest against the seating in the governorship of the newly-elected candidate, Ramon Ramos, regarded as a political affiliate of Calles. Protest leaders said Ramos could not take oath under the constitution on the grounds that he was neither born in Sonora nor had he resided there for ten years.

Representatives of 57 labor organizations marched through the streets of Tampico, demanding that Dr. Rafael Villarreal, Governor of Tamaulipas, resign.

Villarreal was an ally of Gen. Calles, as was former Gov. Lastra of Tabasco, who resigned last week under fire and who reached Mexico City today. It was reported he would shortly go to the United States.

Although in a recent interview, Lastra's political superior, Tomas Garrido Canabal, said he would remain in Tabasco, military headquarters at Villa Hermosa said they expected him to depart in a few days for Puerto Rico to establish a permanent residence.

Oyster Areas Are Menaced By Tiny Borers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 29.—Destruction threatens the oyster industry of tidewater Maryland and the Chesapeake Bay, according to information received from the oyster patrol boats of the conservation department of the State. A small, boring parasite, shaped like a periwinkle and with a sharp needle-like drill, or bill, has attacked beds from Delaware to Tangier Sound on the Eastern Shore of Maryland and practically destroyed the oysters.

It also has invaded the western shore, affecting oysters in the Patuxent River from its mouth to Battle Creek, and in the Potomac River from its mouth to St. Catherine's Sound.

Dr. R. C. Truitt, of the Marine Laboratory at Solomon's Island, has as yet found nothing to check the scourge. Since the borer drills the shell of each oyster full of small holes the oyster dies. Whole areas are now non-productive. Maryland has already spent $25,000 in an effort to replant the oyster beds in Tangier Sound.

An extensive boat patrol is maintained by the State in order to protect th eindustry and enforce conservation laws.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., July 29.—Somerset County oystermen believe that the plan of the Federal Government to plant 300,000 bushels of oyster shells in Somerset waters will do much to restore the industry on the Eastern Shore.

Two bureaus to handle relief and welfare activities in Montgomery County will be maintained under the new plan devised by State and county authorities it was indicated yesterday following announcement of the personnel of the county welfare board by the State Board of Aids and Charities.

Lutes and Dr. Claude Mitchell, of Silver Spring, and Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, of Bethesda.

Other relief activities in the county, including child supervision, hospitalization cases, family aid cases and general relief work financed with county funds will be administered by the committee heading the County Public Welfare Department created by the counyt commissioners at the beginning of the fiscal year.

To permit complete organization of the two new boards, the commissioners have announced that the Montgomery County Social Service League and the supervisor of county aid will continue to supervise county relief work until the end of August, at which time the new system will be placed into effect.

The Rockville Volunteer Fire Department will meet Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the fire department building, it was announced yesterday by Raymond C. Karge, secretary.

The annual picnic of the Rockville Baptist Sunday School will be held today at Glen Echo Park. Revival of the picnic, which has not been held for several years, was decided upon by the officers of the Sunday school because of the great interest in this event in former years.

The trip to the amusement park will be made in trucks and private cars. The cavalcade will leave the church at 10:30 a. m. and an extensive program of amusement will be featured by picnic lunch in the park grove.

The last of the summer sessions of the mission study class of the Women's Society of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church will take place tomorrow at 11 a. m. on the porch of Mrs. J. A. Child Beaters Freed by Court At Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU. 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Alexandria 623.

With the understanding that Harry Gregory, 37, and his wife, Jean, 19, would stay out of Virginia for at least two years, the sentences of 12 months and 60 days, respectively, imposed on this couple for child-beating, has been closed by suspension of their sentences. This action was taken in police court yesterday by Judge Reese Duncan, on motion of E. Joel Tregar, attorney, and with the approval of Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan.

The case of Gregory and his wife, arrested for beating little Rose Mary, three and a half years old, whom they had taken from the House of Mercy in Washington, gained nationwide prominence when Gregory at first agreed to accept a whipping by a policeman in lieu of the 12 months sentence.

Plans were made for the public whipping, a large bull whip was found, and Claude McDonald, giant policeman, was selected to administer the lashing. Crowds gathered, sound trucks of motion picture companies arrived and set up their equipment, and even roofs of adjoining buildings were black with people.

Tregar, attorney for Gregory, went into conference with Judge Duncan, then went to the jail and conferred with Gregory. Evidently Gregory lost his nerve, for Tregar returned, again conferred with the judge, and the clerk of the court announced:

"In the case of Harry and Jean Gregory, they have elected to serve their sentences."

The child was turned over to the Alexandria Children's Home and Day Nursery, and a few days later was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Treakle.

The Bond Tailors, Incorporated, manufacturers of men's clothing, which has recently remodled the old Paff Shoe Co's. plant at Washington and Gibbon streets, plans to begin operations within the next month, according to Dan S. Hollenge, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. However, he states there will be no sewing done at the local plant, this being done probably in Baltimore.

The plant was induced to come to Alexandria through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, which has been in negotiations for about a year.

Two youths, arrested Saturday night and charged by the police with entering the hardware store of Worth Hulfish & Sons, 315 King street, were arraigned in police court yesterday. The older of the two, Frank Briscoe, 18, was held for the grand jury, while his companion, 15, was referred to the juvenile court. The arrest was made by Detective Sergt. Edgar Sims.

Maggie Osley, colored, of the 1300 block Cameron street, reported to the police that, while she was serving a jail sentence in default of payment of a fine, her house was robbed, most of her clothing being taken. Police say indications are that the intruders evidently had a party at the Osley home, as the house was in disorder, with many cigar stumps on the floors.

The funeral of Mrs. Olivia W. Evans, aged 81 years, widow of J. Milton Evans, who died Sunday night in the Alexandria Hospital, will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home, 912 Cameron street. The Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and the Rev. Dr. John S. Sowers, pastor of the Del Ray Baptist Chirch, will officiate and burial will be in the Union Cemetery.

Mrs. Evans was the daughter of the late John B. and Elizabeth Murray Yates, of Falmouth, Va., and spent her early life in Richmond. She had made her home with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary E. Evans, the widow of her eldest son, the late Lieut. Col. Louis M. Evans, Signal Corps, U. S. A., and is survived by one son, Guy B. Evans, of Alexandria.

The funeral of John Dennis Normoyle was held yesterday morning in St. Mary's Catholic Church, conducted by the Rev. J. F. Jurgens, the Rev. M. J. Hartigan and the Rev. Leonard J. Koster. Active pallbearersbearers were Judge William P. Woolls, Judge Robinson Moncure, T. Reginald Dyson, Andrew Sheridan, R. E. McGahey, Edward A. Harlow. Honorary pallbearers were Dr. Edward A. Gorman, Thomas L. Carter, Judge James Reece Duncan, Francis T. Quinn, Jerome Kaufmann, Richard Hartigan, Robert F. Downnam, M. R. O'Sullivan, John A. King, Paul Delaney, H. J. McFarland, R. H. Cox, Carlin R. Creighton and Michael T. Dwyer.

The Alexandria Rotary Club will hear reports from the recent Rotary district assembly held in Harrisonburg, from President R. A. Bogle, and Secretary Alfred Thomson, at the weekly luncheon meeting at 12:30 o'clock today in the George Mason Hotel.

John W. Howard, program chairman, will present the Sydenstricker Mountaineers as a program number. E. A. Swesley, chairman of the committee on the Alexandria Children's Home and Day Nursery, will report on the needs of that institution.

District No. 1, Daughters of America, will hold a meeting this evening in Carpenter's Hall, Prince and Royal streets. This district is composed of 14 councils in northern Virginia, and the meeting has been scheduled for 117 North Pitt street, but notice is called to the change of place.

A meeting of the Young Democrats Club will be held tomorrow evening at 8 p. m., in the George Mason Hotel, for a pre-election rally.

$69,430 Low P. O. Bid.

A low bid of $69,430 for the construction of a new postoffice at Staunton, Va., was submitted to the Treasury Department yesterday by A. Farnell Blair, of Rockingham, N. C., according to the Associated Press. The bids submitted ranged up to approximately $80,000.

Witnesses Back Mortgage Deal With Publisher

Ten Take Stand Against Bradford's Appeal to Court at Bel Air.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., July 29.—Ten witnesses took the stand in Circuit Court today to testify that the sale of the farm of William W. Bradford under a mortgage foreclosure was made in a legal manner.

Bradford has asked the court not to ratify the sale because he contended the price of $21,500 paid by John D. Worthington, Bel Air publisher, did not cover the full value of the property.

Previously he had tried to get a six-year moratorium under the Frazier-Lemke act, since declared unconstitutional.

The plaintiff rested his case this morning with the testimony of James Bosley, clerk of the board of county commissioners, who said the Bradford estate had been assessed for $27,000.

The defense, through its 10 witnesses, attempted to show that, in addition to the sale being conducted in the usual manner, the price paid for the property under the foreclosure was fair in consideration of the average prices of farm land.

Thomas C. Hopkins, field representative of the Potomac Joint Stock Land Bank, a co-defendant with Worthington, said the bank was forced to foreclose on its mortgage because of the declining prices and the lack of earnings from the Bradford property.

The defense had only three more witnesses to be heard tomorrow morning. Arguments were expected to be completed before court recessed in the afternoon.

300 Families Left Homeless By Ohio Flood

Five-Foot Wall of Water Swamps Huge Crops of Hocking Valley.

By the Associated Press.

Logan, Ohio, July 29.—A devastating wall of water 5 feet high, which swept through the fertile Hocking Valley leaving one dead and property damage of upward of $1,000,000, was subsiding tonight.

The Red Cross and local relief agencies immediately began to alleviate suffering among the hundreds of families left homeless. The flood, following three days of heavy rains, was the worst since 1913.

At Lancaster 300 families were homeless, at least five houses were carried away and five persons were injured.

Claude Carpenter, a Lancaster grocer marooned with 30 other persons last night, drowned when the swift current upset a rowboat carrying him to safety.

The water had dropped 2 feet by nightfall here. Residents went to work with shovels and brooms to clear streets, sidewalks, porches and rooms.

Sheriff Joe Farbeann predicted the river would return to a normal stage tomorrow. He said there was nothing to a report that a girl swimmer had drowned near Lancaster.

Federal relief headquarters in Columbus rushed a supply of relief-manufactured mattresses to the flood district and instructed local relief offices to give every co-operation.

Sheriff Farbeann estimated property damage in Hocking County at between $100,000 and $250,000 and the office of G. A. Chambers, Hocking County agricultural agent, reported 50 per cent of an expected bumper crop of wheat and corn had been ruined.

H. F. Thayer, agricultural agent, made a similar estimate for Fairfield County (Lancaster) and said that "on a wild guess" crop damage would be between "$300,000 and $500,000."

The sweeping water inundated the best crops, said H. O. Ramsower, head of the Ohio State University's agricultural extension.

The water rose 9 inches an hour at Lancaster before the tributaries of the Hocking loosed themselves completely. At Rockbridge, 7 miles north of Logan, the waters reached the peak set in 1913 but subsided completely by nightfall.

France Reinforces African Troops

German Border Forces Also Strengthened.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 29.—The French government moved today to man forts along the German border and to reinforce its troops in French Somaliland, where tribal disorders have been reported as a result of the tense Italo-Ethiopian situation.

New army units were ordered created for service on the German border, and air force detachments and a battalion of Senegalese sharpshooters were sent to the East African territory to reinforce troops already there.

A decree promulgated today directed the organization of two new infantry regiments and the motorization of a cavalry division to occupy fortifications on the German border September 1, for which time a special contingent of conscripts have been called to the colors six weeks earlier than the remainder of the 1935 class.

Officials ordered reorganization and redistribution of five infantry regiments, seven "fortress" battalionsof Alpine "Blue Devils," two artillery regiments, a battalion of tanks and an engineer regiment.

New York, July 29 (AP).—Julius A. Heide, jr., son of the wealthy candy manufacturer, today was ordered by Justice John Warren, of domestic court, to pay $22.50 a week for the support of his wife and child.

Attorneys said that Heide's salary was $32.50 a week and that his father had discontinued all gifts except Christmas and birthday presents, which, they said, totaled only $125.

'Black Book' Is Ruled Out In Schultz Trial

Case Against Beer Baron Greatly Weakened by Judge's Decision.

By the Associated Press.

Maloney, N. Y., July 29.—Deprived of important evidence—a little black book—the Government brought to its concluding phases tonight its case against Arthur "Dutch Schultz" Flegenheimer, Bronx beer "big shot," in his second trial for income tax evasion in the lucrative beer running days of 1929-31.

Schultz and his attorneys hailed as a major victory the suppression by Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant of the famous black ledger in which Schultz kept the details of his beer business. His attorneys conceded to the Government that he did not file income tax returns for 1929, 1930 and 1931.

The ledger, considered the basis for the Government's case, was handed over to his attorneys when Judge Bryant upheld the defense contention that the book was illegally seized by Federal agents from Schultz' headquarters in the Bronx.

Martin Conboy, special Federal prosecutor, refused to admit that suppression of the ledger was a blow to the Government's case.

"Not even the suspicion of a blow," Conboy declared.

The broad-jawed Schultz had a different impression, and he grinned with relief when the ledger came back.

"I feel better now that we've got it back," he grunted.

The return of the tell-tale ledger removed the opportunity for the Government to introduce figures from Schultz' business as a check on his bank accounts.

Julius Salke, New York City policeman, testified Schultz once tried to bribe him in return for his freedom after the officers had arrested the Bronx beer boss following a gun fight between Schultz' lieutenants and police on Fifth avenue in 1931.

Salke's partner, Detective Stephen Dirosa, substantiated Salke's testimony.

"He offered us 50 grand and a house in Westchester," Dirosa testified.

Gang's Lawyer In Urschel Plot Gets Ten Years

Ben Laska, of Denver, Cries Protest Over Sentence in Kidnaping Case.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, July 29.—Jumpy little Ben B. Laska, dapper defender of kidnapers, received 10 years today for conspiracy in the $200,000 abduction of Charles F. Urschel, oil millionaire.

Bitterly he sputtered a vehement denial later to reports he said he has heard that he might try suicide to avoid prison.

"I know people are saying I may 'blow my top,'" the frail Denver attorney said. Then he demanded:

"But you never heard of a Jew killing himself, did you?"

Laska, whose conviction was hailed by the Government as a victory in the drive against lawyers who defend kidnapers, protested tearfully. An appeal was filed immediately.

Lawyer Shouts Protest.

"Ten years," he cried. "They gave me ten years for taking a fee to defend a man! They stood me up just like I was a common criminal instead of an attorney who has practiced his profession 27 years. "It's awful * * * terrible * * * to treat an innocent man like that!"

Laska was the twentieth person to be sentenced by Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught for various roles in the machine gun abduction of the Oklahoma City oil man July 22, 1933. Urschel was returned unharmed. Most of the ransom was recovered.

The conviction of Laska was based on testimony by Edward Feldman and his mother, Clara Feldman, that the Denver attorney accepted from them $10,000 in "hot ransom cash" to defend Albert Bates, convicted kidnaper, later directing disposal of the remainder of Bates' $75,000 share of the booty.

His Confederates Favored.

Feldman and his mother received suspended five-year sentences for their confessed part in the conspiracy.

Protesting his innocence, Laska stood up before Judge Vaught, after motion for a new trial had been overruled.

With arms outspread, he raised a tear-streaked face.

"Judge, all I can say is—be reasonable," he pleaded. "An innocent man is going to be sentenced."

"It is not pleasant for me to sentence an attorney," said Judge Vaught. "On the other hand, an offense has been committed. Someone must pay for it."

After pronouncing sentence, the judge approved a $10,000 appeal bond.

Senators Ready To Hear Cramer

Tydings Committee to Quiz Appointee and Critics.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's nomination of Lawrence W. Cramer as Governor of the Virgin Islands will be considered today at an open session of Senator Tydings' Territories Committee.

Virgin Islands witnesses who testified against former Gov. Paul M. Pearson, resulting in his removal to a post in the Interior Department, have been instructed to be present. Some of them have expressed opposition to the Cramer appointment.

Cramer likewise was asked to appear and bring anyone he wished to testify concerning his qualifications.

No appointment has yet been made to the vacancy on the Virgin Islands district bench created by the removal of Judge T. Webber Wilson to a post on the Federal Parole Board in the same presidential shake-up that displaced Pearson.

New Issues In 1935.

The record of new issues during the first six months of 1935 is both gratifying and disappointing. The pronounced increase in the volume of offerings as compared with the preceding year removes former fears that the securities act would be administered in a way to discourage new financing. But there is as yet little evidence of interest in new issues for purposes of business expansion. A large proportion of the offerings represents refunding operations—a development encouraged by the low interest rates and the active demand for high grade investment securities.

With obvious reluctance the SEC admits that the funds raised for plant and equipment and other forms of capital expenditure have amounted to the negligible figure of $22,000,000 out of total issues of of $665,000,000. It hastens to explain, however, that refunding is a needed preliminary to new capital financing, since it reduces fixed charges, releases savings for capital outlays, and makes it easier for borrowers to obtain funds on reasonable terms.

Although the outlook for a genuine revival of the capital market depends upon many factors over which the SEC has no control, it is evident that the commission members are anxious to make the working of the securities act as innocuous as possible. If business improvement continues and no further blows are dealt to confidence, the chances seem good for realization of hopeful prophecies that the way has been opened for a flow of new capital into industry.

Bait For Miss Bass.

It is not often that we take literal issue with our correspondents but there is a limit to everything. And that limit was reached yesterday in a letter which appeared on this page decrying the habit of fishing in the Potomac. Miss Bass (sic) contends that the south side of the Basin is always littered with trash, odoriferous bags and crumbs of left-over lunches. Moreover, she goes on to state, the sea wall is full of men, women and children with "apparently no ambition except to fish," which is "not conducive to job-hunting."

To give Miss Bass the benefit of every doubt, perhaps she never set out on a sunny morning with a bucket full of worms, a pocket full of sandwiches, and an oversupply of optimism. Perhaps, perish the thought, she never even had a brother who started out with the determination to land a 20-pounder, but returned undaunted, and just as happy, if the 20-pound ambition had dwindled to a 2-inch realization. Or perhaps she is a very old, old, old lady who just can't remember. Could any opponent ask for fairer handicaps?

But when it comes to argument, we are not willing to concede a single point. Fishing along the Potomac is, to put it mildly, one of the most pleasant and picturesque sights that Washington has to offer. Grizzled old men, with shirt sleeves rolled up, a chaw of tobacco, and straw hats pushed back to a precarious angle, forget that our civilization has little use for age. Many unfortunates whose homes lack beauty and coolness are refreshed and relaxed by this diverting sport, which carries an extra inducement because it is free. As for its relation to job-hunting, is it possible Miss Bass never heard the lines:

There's none of our employments
With fishing can compare.

Parnassus Afloat.

Tone-deaf though he was, Emerson was far from blind, as is attested by his remark that "music is the poor man's Parnassus." Could he have attended a sunset concert by the National Symphony Orchestra, such as that played Sunday night at the Watergate, he might have amended his observation to include not only the poor man, but those of every circumstance. For a fine cross-section of Washington was there, clustered in various attitudes about the mammoth eggshell of a sounding board—mounted on a barge, you know—some on the stone steps, some stretched out on the grass, some bobbing about in canoes, but all soaring on the easy rhythms of good music, well played.

If there ever was a city adapted by climate and circumstance to outdoor summer music, that city is Washington. With the Potomac for a stage and the evening sky for a backdrop, no more pleasant decor could be conceived to make music refreshing and appealing to the wilted spirits of those condemned to blister in this oven-city of jibbering typewriters and clattering street cars. Only cold beer, close at hand, was lacking.

Credit goes to Dr. Kindler and his executive assistants for their perseverance in organizing the series; to the musicians for their careful and effective execution; to those who contributed to the orchestra's funds and to the relief officials who saw fit to supplement the subscriptions so that the players might be properly recompensed. And gratitude must not be withheld from those gods who have ordered clear skies to date. The pity is (always, the higher the rapture the more inevitable this plaint) that it was not until this year that the concerts were made possible.

Helping Hitler.

The economic situation in Germany is growing steadily more desperate. While the number of registered unemployed has recently dropped below the 2,000,000 mark, due to rearmament activities and governmental work-relief projects, this superficial gain is more than offset by rapidly rising prices and increasing domestic distrust of currency stability. Side by side with a decline in wages, reflecting a diminishing national income, are seen mounting living costs uncontrollable by any official price-fixing efforts.

This increasing economic pinch, operating on a people who have had no stable prosperity since 1914, is undoubtedly a factor in the intensification of persecution methods recently permitted or inspired by the Nazi government. To say that the present leaders of Germany are jittery is to put it mildly. Those who are not complete fanatics unquestionably realize the utter failure of the Third Reich to provide even a modest degree of economic security for its brutally regimented subjects. Along with this failure goes the catastrophic decline of Germany in the esteem of the civilized world. Now only a hollow shell of the great nation of the past, Germany sinks ever deeper into decadence, under a grotesque and barbarous leadership which brutally subdues even mild protests against steadily worsening social conditions.

This dramatic and terrible collapse inevitably arouses profound repercussions in our small and closely integrated world. Germany has contributed so much to modern civilization that her decline and fall arouse a sense of horror which may take many forms. The simplest and most natural is an attempt to hit back at the regime in power at Berlin. And in the past week a series of such reactions has taken place in this country, culminating in an insult to the German flag in New York Harbor and in the demand for a Nation-wide boycott of German goods and services voiced Sunday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Whatever the provocation, such headstrong actions are to be deplored. In the first place they are directed against Germany, rather than the group which has that country in its power, and therefore, are likely to solidify all Germans behind a regime which many of them abhor.

In the second place retaliatory measures like a boycott are likely to injure the persecuted in Germany far more than the persecutors, and when launched by commercial or trade-union elements are also subject to suspicion as to their disinterest. Furthermore, active international provocation of this sort comes strangely from a country which, when constructive work is to be done, generally assumes the desirability of complete isolation from the problems of Europe. And, finally, the basic fairness of undiscriminating attack on present-day Germany, without considering the complicated factors which have contributed to the highly neurotic condition of its people, is certainly open to question.

Nothing would more quickly rally the American people behind an intolerable government in Washington than irresponsible foreign attacks upon our flag or our leaders. In this respect there is no reason to suppose that the Germans are any different from ourselves. Except for the contumely into which the war brought Germany, Hitler could never have achieved power there. The best way to keep him in power is to make the Germans feel that the world is united against them as a race, and that the Mayor of New York City, or a Senator from Utah, or the president of the A. F. of L. are somehow ordained by civilization to lead a crusade for their redemption.

Soon or late either the Nazi movement, or Germany, or both, will go under. Every intelligent American hopes that it will be the former alone. Every informed American is entitled to express his opinion on the subject and should show his abhorrence of the political and intellectual degeneracy which Hitlerism involves. But it ill becomes us, and can only hamper the regeneration of Germany, to overstep the definite line which separates legitimate criticism from officious and unintelligent actions calculated to defeat their own ostensible purpose.

Volume I, Number 1.

There is a certain amount of inspiration in the masthead of any magazine carrying the words "Volume I, Number 1." Especially is this true when the production makes its debut in a field already cluttered with brave failures. The editors of The Southern Review are to be congratulated, therefore, not only on their imposing list of contributors and luxurious format, but also on their temerity in face of proven odds. It is to be published quarterly at Louisiana State University under the editorial guidance of Dr. Charles W. Pipkin, dean of L. S. U. Graduate School and one of the most active intelligences in Huey Long's domain.

The Southern Review begins auspiciously, as have other ventures in the new South, and readily conveys the promise that its bounds will be far above mere sectional interests. The first issue boasts, among others, articles by a Pulitzer Prize winner, a Guggenheim Fellow, and a Scribner Novelette Prize winner. There are many names from the old Tennessee group of "Fugitives," such as Donald Davidson, Allen Tate and John Crowe Ransom. The subjects have attractive range, and their treatment stimulating depth. The typography of the 208 pages is excellent and the lavish format is not greatly handicapped by advertising. Apparently Louisiana State University is not cramped by lack of funds.

If the editor were searching for a legendary yardstick for The Southern Review, he would have no further to look than within one of its own articles. There Ford Madox Ford states that "to possess a Literature, a country must have a whole cloud—or better still, a whole populace—of writers instinct with a certain skill in, a certain respect for, a certain productivity of, writing." The writers of this first issue measure up. They have assured a promising debut for the youngest, but not the least imposing, production of American literary regionalism.

Taxes And The Budget.

Calling the pending tax bill a "hoax" and a "sterile political gesture," Senator Vandenberg concludes that "under any circumstances and at any time, a tax bill unrelated to budget legislation is bad legislation and wasted resources." "Our bills for the next fiscal year," he urges, "should be courageously reduced to the minimum permitted by our unavoidable necessities. Then our taxes should, if possible, balance this budget."

The importance of studying and discussing the Administration's new tax proposals in connection with budgetary objectives was similarly stressed yesterday by Dr. Jules I. Bogen in the first of a series of articles appearing on the page opposite. Dr. Bogen agrees with Senator Vandenberg that it is a futile gesture to raise a few hundred million dollars in taxes as a means of meeting a serious budgetary problem. But unlike Senator Vandenberg, who advocates both retrenchment and a comprehensive system of new taxes to preserve financial solvency, Dr. Bogen undertakes to show how budgetary balance might be attained without imposing any new taxes.

If business recovery were to proceed until it reached the level of 1928, he says, revenue receipts from existing taxes probably would reach $6,000,000,000, an increase of $2,200,000,000 over the returns of the fiscal year 1935. Then, if the Government were to substitute direct relief for work relief and limit outlays to $500 per year for each of 3,500,000 unemployed persons, emergency expenditures would simultaneously be cut more than 50 per cent. The result: a balanced budget with something left over for debt retirement.

In calling attention to the fiscal complications that will arise through creation of huge reserve funds under the social insurance legislation, Dr. Bogen touches upon a subject to which Congress has as yet paid virtually no attention. As the sums paid into the old-age insurance fund alone would amount to an estimated $36,000,000,000 by 1965, it is obvious that the Government need make no future provision for retirement of the outstanding public debt. Indeed the Secretary of the Treasury would find it difficult to invest these reserves in Government securities, as required by law, if debt retirement were to proceed. With appropriations for the sinking fund no longer necessary, a substantial slice would be cut from current budgetary appropriations.

Of course the happy solution of our budgetary problems which Dr. Bogen envisages as possible is based upon admittedly optimistic assumptions. Thus a speedy return to the limited allowances of direct relief after a lavish experiment in work relief would encounter bitter opposition. Moreover, the chances of a business recovery that would stand comparison with 1928 seem slim at the present time. Nevertheless, Congress will be forced eventually to effect drastic economies if it wants to avert governmental insolvency. And it can not begin too soon to relate the vital importance of business improvement to the budgetary situation.

Even if the outlook appears less roseate to most people than the picture suggested by Dr. Bogen's hypotheses, it is obviously not as gloomy as it is often painted. Students of finance may not agree as to methods of procedure, but they know that the budget can be balanced if Congress has the courage to set about the task with serious intent.

"Gambling is always the means of getting something for nothing," declares an evangelist. Say, parson, where can we find that sort of gambling?

The average person doesn't believe in signs unless they point the way he wants to go.

A Crime Against American Workmen

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Even President Roosevelt has seemed to realize at times the importance of building up the heavy industries so that they may absorb more labor. When he asked for his $4,880,000,000 for work relief he was certain that the purchase of material for construction purposes would stimulate production. But while the Public Works Administration invites cooperation by industry, it erects barriers of an astounding nature. An order signed by a deputy administrator, and which has been in operation since May 25, requires that a "borrower of money must buy foreign material where the value of the order is $10,000 or more and the price is 15 per cent less."

Blunders at Washington never cease. But blunder is not the proper word to apply to this order. The stimulating of employment in foreign countries, while stalwart American workmen are begging for jobs to save them from the dole, is not a blunder. It is a crime!

Reaction To Long.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I enjoyed reading Westbrook Pegler's article on Huey Long in The Post of July 27. It expresses my reaction to the radio address of the Louisiana Senator a few nights ago. He assailed President Roosevelt for his dictatorial powers over Congress and his repudiation of the 1932 platform of the Democratic party.

From all newspaper accounts, Long is supreme dictator of the State of Louisiana, and would-be dictator of adjoining States. If the State has rights which are not to be encroached upon by the Federal Government, even so the people of a State have rights not subject to the will of one man. People in glass houses should not throw stones.

After listening to Senator Long's radio address one is impressed with the fact that he could not forget Huey Long long enough to take part in the affairs of the Nation, and that he is only using the radio as a means of advertising—first, himself as an individual, and, second, the sale of bonds of the State of Louisiana. G. L. PIERCE.

More On Ethiopia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. J. O. Knott's letter on "Ethiopia and the Church" ably elaborates the Post-Impressionist's article upon Abyssinian Christianity. But an illuminating supplement to both these writers is to be found in a recent article, published in Svit, by the Rev. Prof. S. Bulgakoff, formerly an eminent member of the faculty of one of Russia's greatest universities, who was converted from agnosticism shortly after the Bolshevik revolution.

Father Bulgakoff points out that, nationally, Ethiopia became Christian through the missionary efforts of St. Frumenti, who was consecrated a bishop by St. Afanasii, of Alexandria. "The Abyssinians," says Father Bulgakoff, "recognize the Seven Sacraments * * * They baptize boys the fortieth day after birth, girls the eightieth. They receive Holy Communion at least once yearly and observe strictly both the Great Fasts and every Wednesday and Friday. Their favorite saints are SS. Michael and George * * * The responses in the litanies are made by all the people. Besides the vocal music, there are cymbals and drums.

"The churches of the Abyssinians are round in form and roofed with straw. They are usually built on high hills, well removed from the nearest town. They are as numerous, however, as were churches in old Russia, but the ikons are not so rich as were those of old Russia. There are many monasteries, which are the national seats of learning.

"Outside the church, the priests wear civilian clothes, but always carry in one hand a tiny cross; they are highly respected by the people. The head of the Abyssinian Church is the Abuna, or Metropolitan. The second in rank is the Echet, head of the monastic clergy, but not a bishop; he is the administrative officer of the church."

Particularly interesting is Dr. Bulgakoff's assertion that—although the Abyssinians accepted the sixth century monophysite heresy, and although the Abuna is consecrated by the Copt Archbishop of Egypt—the Abyssinian Christians now consider themselves a branch of the non-monophysite Orthodox Church of Russia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Egypt, Bulgaria, Rumania, Jerusalem and, of course, the United States. Belloc On Gold.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: G. K.'s Weekly (London) of June 29, 1935, contains the following letter:

Sir—Your correspondent asks whether I favour a return to the gold standard. Certainly—and much more than that, a return to use of gold coins for general use in circulation and as private property in the pockets of the people, and over counters. Sound money in a substance which cannot be manufactured at will is essential to freedom. Sham money in any form puts us wholly at the mercy of those who issue it . . . There is another point worth remembering. Sham money, metaphysical money, can never be long maintained. It never has in the whole course of history been maintained for more than a few years. . . .

H. BELLOC.

Are not these sound views as pertinent and important in this country as in England?

Mr. Scherbak Explains.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to the article which appeared in The Post of Monday, July 29, "Big Game Hunter Explains," etc., I beg to publish the following statements:

Your interviewer seemed to have taken more interest in the romantic side of my travels and less in the hard facts underlying my reconstruction systems. The plan, "S O S 48," for the reduction of unemployment and distress, has already been published in The Post of May 30, 1933. The plan of the present Administration for the employment of youths follows very closely this plan. It is backed by approvals of Messrs. Frederick A. Delano, Langdon Post, and the associate director of the New York State Employment Service, and many others.

The plan, "S O S 72," for the reduction of fraud and waste, is supported by statements of the experts of Brookings Institution and of the Society of C. P. A., and many financial institutions. However, I never mentioned that there is any fraud and waste in State departments, as your article mentions.

Relative to my system to develop the speed and fighting power of naval forces without increasing armament, I referred to a special system of rapid intercommunication which already has been declared by the U. S. Navy as an excellent means of representation of war problems. However, I never mentioned that there is needless expenditure in the Navy Department and I never mentioned that this plan has been offered to any other country.

I never refused to reveal my plans, but mentioned that I do not believe that your interviewer would care to go into them fully.

I actually offered $5,000 to anyone who can show that any one of my reconstruction plans wouldn't bring substantial advantages, coordination and efficiency.

In all modesty, I beg to state that although I guided five jungle expeditions, I never was a big game hunter and now I am only hunting after huge administrative problems, and hope this does not justify the appellation of adventurer, as your interviewer called me.

Dogs, Dogs, Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I moved from the city to Chevy Chase I expected to meet many interesting people. This has proved true, but I also have met as many dogs, and sometimes unwillingly, at all times of the day and night. Big dogs, little dogs, pretty dogs, homely dogs, high-class and low-class—some vicious and some kind, but all eying you rather reproachfully and making the shivers run down your spine.

The stores are full of them—sometimes so big they take up the whole passageway.

I have been a lover of dogs and still am—in their place—but there's no room for any more out here.

Still Another Old Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why go far afield to find a real old church, when right at the "south gate" of Washington—to wit, Broad Creek, Md., 11 miles from Anacostia—stands St. John's Episcopal Church, finished, as it is today, on March 26, 1723, nine years before the birth of George Washington.

Success Of The Sunset Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The concerts at the Watergate have been a revelation of the effects of music in the open, in a setting of entrancing beauty.

The success of the Washington Symphony Orchestra is due primarily to the personality, industry, vision and musicianship of Dr. Hans Kindler. It is a splendidly deserved success. One should not forget, also, an orchestra keyed to its best, a virile committee, generous contributors and the work of Mr. Cappel.

Some ideas present themselves: We have in Washington governmental bands, among the best in the world. A number of the directors are sensitive, talented musicians. Why could not the Watergate setting be used on certain evenings by them for classical programs? Open-air and band effects affiliate happily. Also, the "shell" was built by Government funds. What a stimulation and encouragement for these directors to play under such ideal conditions!

Again, support should be given to our great visiting orchestras. They should not be permitted to languish and disappear.

And, again, women in the orchestra. It may not be incorrect to say that women have made the Washington orchestra. Then why, if prepared and efficient, should they not have a place among the players?

Woman, in her intuition and finesse, is very close to music, and the visualization of the feminine in an orchestra makes a most satisfying and delightful impression.

These suggestions are only personal impressions. Some may not even be possible. At least they are presented constructively, and are kindly meant.

The Post Impressionist

Food— For Thought.

Post Office, Tuesday.

WE need a new word—and a restaurant-revolution.

Demands for these commodities reached us this morning. Alone, the Column is unable to meet them. But, convinced there is nothing human which our confederated contributors cannot contrive, we submit both matters to their consideration.

"I am glad indeed," writes Hoosier A. H., "that the Post Impressionist is back from vacation. But right away you provoke me to appeal to you for a word.

"Perhaps I'd better quote you 'Lives there a man (or even woman) with soul so dead as never to himself (or herself) . . .' You get me? I refer to the need of a pronoun covering the singular which would include both sexes.

"We have the neuter 'it,' the plurals 'them,' 'those' and 'these.' But one would be criticized for calling even a baby 'it'—and the others are out.

"I've never ventured into Sanskrit: It might be that you could filch a word from that tongue and incorporate it into English. Everybody would bless you. Why, I know of no better use to which your Column could be put than a successful search for the most needed word in English!"

Think that over, please. And, meanwhile, "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" this digestive diatribe from one of Washington's great gourmets, Joseph Danziger:

"No less eminent an authority than yourself," says he, "has accused me of being too vocal about refreshment in general and food in particular. All right: I admit the soft impeachment, though sometimes it is tough—as on the occasion out in Nebraska when I complained to a hotel keeper because the matutinal steak was so tough I couldn't eat it:

"'You're right, fellah,' he cheerfully agreed; 'I had that steak before you, and I couldn't eat it either.'

"But listen to my present tale of woe.

"A recent Sunday promised to be hot, so my wife and I decided to take our Sabbath walk early. We arose at the uncanny hour of 6 a. m.—had only a sip of tea and a bite of toast, in anticipation of a genuine breakfast en route—and walked for three miles to a charmingly rural spot well within the urban confines of this Capital City.

"By that time we were ravenously hungry. We headed for a delightfully picturesque little garden, where, we had been told, good food was procurable, stimulating our respective appetites the while with visions of ice-cold melons, vigorous coffee and the sundry etceteras necessary for a Sunday breakfast. Yet, arrived at our objective, we were confronted with a sign:

"'NO BREAKFASTS SERVED ON SUNDAY!'"

This was too much for the Danzigers. Says Mr. D.: "I took down my hair, sat on the curb and wept. My wife repined in three languages, excluding the Scandinavian.

"Now I ask you!" shouts Mr. Danziger, with oratorical license. "Here is a spot almost entirely surrounded by apartment houses and apartment hotels. Their inhabitants must surely prefer to 'go out for breakfast' on Sunday. Americans fail to appreciate the noble national breakfast on week days; we rush through a shower of grapefruit, gulp bacon and eggs, inhale a cup of coffee on the run—and so to our desk by 9. But on Sunday there is time to dawdle. And where, in a climate like summer Washington's, could we dawdle to better advantage than in a pleasant garden, before the day grows too Washingtonian hot?"

Then Mr. Danziger goes further. He spreads his net over the whole week. Why, he demands, do we not imitate the French in our eating places?

"We Americans," he reminds us, "are great admirers of Gallic culture. To all venerators of all things Gallic," he continues, "permit me to say that in Paris you can take a little boat on the Seine in the early Cloud and have a delightful breakfast in a pavillion by the water."

Nor are other European cities exempt: "Consider Budapest, Copenhagen, Oslo or Stockholm, Berlin, Munich, Bucharest. Anywhere 'Over There' you can eat while enjoying the delights of the open air. And we call ourselves an out-of-doors people!

"Why," asks Mr. Danziger, "are we such hicks—anyhow, we Washingtonians? In New York, to be sure, they have begun to serve sidewalk-meals after the Parisian manner—but that is objectionable to many; it has its sanitary defects Here in Washington, however—Washington, with its many open places, its broad avenues, its long-term out-door-weather—al fresco eating and drinking should be the rule instead of, as now, the exception."

* * *

One word in the ear, many more restaurants in the open: that's all we need.

Help—help!

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, July 29.—It is seriously proposed that the United States withdraw from the Olympic games in Berlin next year on the ground that the Nazis are unfit to entertain the event or to associate with sportsmen. That would be one way of dodging the thing and there are interesting arguments in favor of the motion to retire.

However, I take it that the object of this move would be to hold the Nazis up to scorn before the world and suggest that this could be done more effectively if the athletes of this country were to do the sporting thing and give the Nazis every opportunity to make themselves notorious as muckers in actual competition. This they would be likely to do as they have shown a rare knack for brutal stupidity and bad manners.

If this country withdraws, the Nazis will be in a position to plead not guilty and even to enter a counter-charge that the Americans, with all their facilities and their vaunted love of games, were afraid to meet the Nazi youth. They can not convict themselves unless they are given all the hundreds of opportunities which occur to a country which is host to the Olympic games to cheat, foul and conspire.

It would further enhance the pleasure of the enterprise from the American point of view to give their athletes a resounding licking at every point of competition in which it is possible to meet them in the long program, from chess to weight-lifting.

• • • •

I AM aware that this is not a very noble sentiment, but unfortunately the Nazis themselves have made it impossible to conduct these games in the chivalrous spirit which prevailed at Los Angeles years ago. The spirit of revenge is contrary to the purposes for which the Olympic games were revived, but the Olympics will cause rancor this time whether they are played or called off. This being unavoidably so, we have nothing to lose and something to gain in the way of prestige by holding up our end as long as it is possible to play at all.

A beautiful opportunity will present itself in the boxing competitions. For reasons which are too long to be gone into at the moment, most of the good boxers, amateur as well as professional, in this country are Jews or Catholics. The Germans will have a pure Nazi team and the Germans, notwithstanding that they have produced the heavyweight champion of the world from a standing start since 1918, are not good fist fighters. Of course, in the Olympic games the scheme of the competition is such that the Americans might have few opportunities to meet Nazis, but the luck of the draw would be certain to create a few such matches. The spectacle of a Milton Goldfarb, with the Jewish star on his boxing trunks, punching the ears off one of the flowers of Nazi youth before a Nazi crowd in Berlin would be a satisfaction worth considering when the proposal to abandon the game is taken up.

Boxing was forbidden in Germany under the Kaiser just as it was forbidden in all but a few American cities. After the war, the Germans took it up in a methodical, main-strength sort of way, but they have little knack for it even now. The American Jew of the city slums, however, has been winning medals among the amateurs and fortunes among the professionals for years.

• • • •

SCHMELING was the best the Germans could produce and he won the heavyweight championship sitting down, thanks to the quick resourcefulness of an American Jew, Joe Jacobs, his manager, who leaped into the ring at the Yankee Stadium and kicked up such a row that the fight could not go on. Up to that moment, Schmeling was losing to Jack Sharkey, and, with a manager less alert and bold, he probably would have been called upon to endure the foul, which had put him on the canvas, and continue the fight. Such things had happened before.

The Olympic games present a fine opportunity to put the Nazis on the spot. Much as they would wish to mob an American Jew or Catholic for slapping one of their Nazi youths around they would have their choice of enduring this humiliation or degrading themselves even worse before that part of the world which calls itself civilized by robbing a competitor or kicking up a riot.

The disturbing thought occurs that a Nazi might beat an American in fair competition.

That would be unpleasant, but the Americans take pride in their sportsmanship and here again would present the contrast by accepting defeat in the sportsmanlike way.

Throughout the writing of this essay I have been conscious that something has been cramping my style. I have just realized what it is. It is the knowledge that if the Olympics were held anywhere in the Southern tier of American States all athletes of the complexion of Tolan, Metcalf, Owens and Peacock would be automatically barred. It causes the pointing finger of scorn to waver somewhat.

Early Kipling

By

William Lyon Phelps

I DO NOT refer to Rudyard Kipling as a baby. Once I asked Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard if he loved his children, and after pretending to consider the question, he replied, "Ye-es; but not when the first one came; it was so exceedingly rudimentary."

I do not know how rudimentary Kipling was as a baby; but he had a literary reputation before he was old enough to vote. By the earliest Kipling I mean the Kipling before his reputation.

In the year 1882, at the age of 16, he became assistant editor on the newspaper called the Civil and Military Gazette and Pioneer at Allahabad, India, and stayed there seven years, though his first volume of verse was published in 1886.

• • • •

On July 3 in London there were sold at auction 72 volumes, containing 1,832 daily issues of this paper. Nearly 200 of these, according to the London Sunday Times, contain Kipling's earliest work in print, some of them filling five or six columns. There are travel-sketches, short stories, ballads, humorous articles. The Times says: "In order not to flourish his signature too much, he seems to have made or observed a rule to sign only one contribution when several were appearing in the same issue, and here there are more unsigned than acknowledged because of this reserve. But any question about their authenticity, apart from the individuality of style, has been settled by close recourse to the office account-books of the period, and these show what an amazing output came from this youngster of genius in those flowering days."

• • • •

Some of the unsigned pieces later appeared in Kipling's early published volumes, like "Plain Tales From the Hills," "Soldiers Three," "Under the Deodars."

The London Times wonders "whether the files of any other newspaper have been treasured and encased like this, all because a precocious and spectacled junior of genius labored in its service."

The New Tax Program

Graduated Corporation Levy Would Hamper Return to Prosperity.

The Post presents herewith the second of a series of six analytical articles on the tax proposals now under congressional consideration. The author is professor of finance at New York University and an outstanding authority in this field.

By Dr. Jules I. Bogen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ANOMALOUSLY enough, among the new tax proposals the one which will affect the largest number of people in this country is the progressive corporate income tax, aimed chiefly at giant corporations. That is because there are probably upward of 5,000,000 individual holders of shares of large corporations, and this tax will fall in the final instance upon them.

The original proposal to levy a progressive corporate income tax at rates of 10 to 17½ per cent, in place of the present uniform 13¾ per cent rate, is not itself of great financial significance. The Treasury estimates that it would yield from $66,900,000 to $103,200,000 of additional revenue to the Federal Government, depending on the rate of progression chosen. At most, this would offset a mere ¼ of 1 per cent of the present total budget deficit.

If such a graduated corporate income tax had been in effect in 1934 it would have reduced earnings of a number of representative corporations by only 4 per cent, according to one compilation. Our largest corporation, American Telephone & Telegraph, earned $5.96 per share of its capital stock on a consolidated basis in 1934. With the graduated tax in effect, its earnings would have been reduced, according to rough estimates, by at most 50 cents per share.

What is involved in the progressive corporate income tax proposal, therefore, is not a new monetary burden of substantial size nearly so much as a vital principle. Experience teaches that once the principle of progression is applied to a tax, it tends to grow and become more pronounced. We have seen what has happened with the surtaxes on personal income. If the same thing happened to corporate taxation, it would probably be only a very short time before similar steep rates of progression would be witnessed in the corporate income levy also.

Hence, if progression in corporate income taxation is wrong, it should be fought to the last ditch and stopped in connection with this present proposal, modest as it is. The pending proposal must be regarded as in the nature of a test case.

• • • •

1. The size of a corporation's income has no relation to its profitability, and hence its ability to pay taxes. It is obvious that the rate of return on a corporation's investment, rather than the aggregate size of its income, determines its ability to contribute to the upkeep of the Government.

If it is desired to tax corporations more nearly in relation to their profitability, and consequently ability to pay, excess profits taxation is the obvious and logical way. This was used extensively during the war, and it is now imposed on a small scale by the Federal Govern ment. The House Ways and Means Committee has proposed such a tax on its own initiative, at rates rising from 5 to 20 per cent on corporate income in excess of 8 per cent on the invested capital of each enterprise. Such high rates, however, are doubtful wisdom at a time when business enterprises are just emerging from a protracted depression, and in many cases face the urgent necessity of rebuilding impaired reserves out of the more liberal profits of prosperous years.

The major difficulty with the excess profits tax is that it depends so largely upon corporate accounting, which itself is at best a series of approximations. The larger the estimated size of a corporation's investment, the less its tax will be with any given level of earnings. Aside from this serious administrative difficulty, however, the excess profits tax alone permits the application of anything like the true progression principle to the taxation of corporate incomes.

2. Large-scale production and distribution are essential characteristics of modern industry. The large enterprise is absolutely inevitable in a number of industries, such as railroad transportation, communications, etc. Hence, to impose higher taxes merely because a corporation is large is to penalize bigness, and often necessary bigness, as such.

• • • •

ALL commentators on the President's new program recognize that the graduated corporation income tax is designed not to raise money, but to place a handicap upon larger corporations, as against their smaller competitors. Why should the Administration want to do this? The chief arguments for its position are:

1. The large concern, with its extensive financial resources, it is contended, enjoys certain innate advantages over the small enterprise. The anti-trust laws have sought to protect the small business by restricting or dissolving the large enterprise when it has been found to abuse its power through unfair trade practices. It is now proposed to supplement the anti-trust laws with a punitive tax on bigness to achieve this end.

In answer to this contention, it must be said that in many industries the small enterprise, with its lesser capital investment and greater flexibility, possesses major advantages over the large concern. There is no uniform rule, in fact, about the relative merits and strength of large and small concerns in general.

From the economic standpoint, the soundest policy is to place large and small enterprises in each industry in a position where they can compete freely to demonstrate their relative merits. If, without indulging in obviously unfair and misleading trade practices, the large enterprise can gain at the expense of smaller rivals, it is in the national interest to permit it free scope. The ultimate objective of economic policy should be to raise and maintain the living standards of the population. This can be attained best by lowering production costs and prices to consumers generally. The size of individual business units should be permitted to adapt itself so as to serve this end most effectively.

2. From the social viewpoint, it is further contended, the small enterprise is more desirable, because it avoids a concentration of economic power.

If the social implications of the concentrated control of wealth are feared, however, this problem should be attacked directly through anti-trust law revision, revival of the old proposal for Federal incorporation of enterprises doing an interstate business or similar pertinent measures. To shoot at the problem of restriction of large corporations in the social interest with a mildly graduated income tax is to fire at a fort with a popgun.

• • • •

THE proposal to make the corporate income tax progressive, so as to penalize the large concerns, bears a special relation to the problem of business recovery.

The large enterprise tends to assume the lead in recovery, just as the small concern may be better able in many industries to weather the storms of depression. The forte of the large business is its ability to produce on a large scale at low cost, and thus to meet a rapidly expanding demand. Because it is more fully mechanized as a rule it carries a large overhead investment in plant and machinery which requires a high rate of operations in relation to capacity to be employed profitably.

Hence, our large corporations have a particularly great stake in economic recovery, for they have most to gain from obtaining enough business to keep their extensive productive facilities fully employed. It is often to their interest to lead the way in lowering prices in quest of a larger volume of sales and a higher rate of operations. It would be sound economics, therefore, to give them every encouragement to go ahead full steam with such efforts to expand consumer demand by lowering prices.

Alfred Marshall, the great English economist, strongly urged that governments impose a special tax on industries which suffer a diminishing rate of return with expanding output, and give a corresponding subsidy to industries which enjoy increasing returns with larger volume. In this way, he proposed to aid the latter to cut prices in order to expand output, and so contribute to a higher standard of living for the community.

The Roosevelt graduated corporate income tax plan, by seeking to impose a penalty impost upon the large corporations which are usually best able to lower prices and increase profits during a period of expanding output, is the exact reverse of that of Marshall. It is one more example, therefore, of where the Administration proposes to impede, rather than aid, the cause of business in recovery in the alleged interests of social reform.

A corporate excess profits tax also would be inconsistent with the Marshall proposal. It is noteworthy, also, that the progressive principle in corporation taxes has not been adopted in any important country abroad, although nearly all apply it in personal income and inheritance taxation. Other governments rely upon their progressive income taxes, rather, to absorb for their treasuries a larger proportion of the income of profitable enterprises after it is paid out to stockholders. Thus, they avoid penalizing large corporations and their many stockholders, large and small, merely because of the size of the enterprise.

• • • •

WE may thus conclude:

1. That a graduated corporate income tax raises a very vital question of precedent, even though the new burden imposed is relatively small of itself.

2. That its prime objective is to penalize bigness in corporate enterprises and not to raise revenue, and for this purpose it is altogether inadequate and futile in the form proposed.

3. That it bears no relation to relative profitability of corporate enterprises and their ability to pay taxes, since only an excess profits tax could apply the principle of progressive taxation to corporate income.

4. That large corporate enterprises tend to lead in business recovery, so that to penalize and discourage them now by graduated income taxes, and even by heavy excess profits imposts, is to hamper further the return to prosperity.

Typhoon Menaces Cities Along Formosa Coast

By the Associated Press.

Taiko, Formosa, July 29.—Emergency guards waited apprehensively and residents sought sturdy shelter tonight as the first blasts of an approaching typhoon roared along the east coast.

Reports from the affected area were meager, because of interrupted wire facilities. About 100 vessels anchored in the harbor of Keelung, chief port of Formosa to escape the blow.

The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency correspondent at Dairen reported to Tokyo the typhoon headed for Formosa after starting in Saitan. He reported heavy rains in east Manchuria had caused the most serious flood there in seven years, with railway service suspended, and many landslides reported.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

From Jackrabbits to Corpses.

"HE is a thoroughly good naturalist who knows his own parish thoroughly," said Charles Kingsley once. So well was that sound saying observed by old Parson Gilbert White in "The Natural History of Selborne"—the first book in the world which raised natural history into the realm of literature—and by Thoreau in "Walden" and his other works, that we have a right to expand the saying and declare that he who knows his own backyard from A to Z knows his universe. Parochial nature study books seem to be on the increase. Even Donald C. Peattie's "An Almanac for Moderns," seeming so wide-ranging, was of that type. He tells me that he did not intend anything parochial, yet the material, as I recognized, was all gathered about Washington.

If we can be brash and give the name of parish to an area several times larger than Europe, here is one more parochial nature survey—"Wild Life in the Southwest" (Banks, Upshaw & Co., Dallas, Tex., $1.75). Oren Arnold wrote it for children—the style is simple, words such as "botanist" are defined immediately after their appearance in the text; there are simple recapitulating questions at the end of each chapter, and a glossary of the more difficult questions at the end of the book. Indeed, the author shows the utmost consideration for the child who will want to read of these strange birds, animals, reptiles, and plants. Eight or ten would be the best beginning age, I should think, though children are so smart nowadays it's hard to tell.

The other end of the book's age-range would probably extend as long as a person has eyesight. I myself found it entrancing.

• • • •

CHAPTER by chapter, Mr. Arnold tells of each of these "outdoor citizens" of the States of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico. Did you know that the ordinary burro, a "lazy, stubborn, flea-bitten, and contrary" creature in most eyes, is one of the wildest animals in North America? And that there is nothing on the continent which can whip him when he wants to fight? There is a grand tale, for example, of a fight between a burro and a mountain lion—two rounds, and off scooted the cat.

Mr. Arnold defends the coyote (pronounced coYO-tay, not CAI-yote) from the charge of being a coward. The animal is merely intelligent enough to avoid trouble. He tells us that there are fully 100,000 mustangs still running wild in the country; that the largest town in the world is (or perhaps rather, was—it is now somewhat decimated) the vast prairie dog colony in west Texas which stretched 250 miles by 100 miles; that when rattlesnakes bite each other they die (contrary to usual superstition); that the greatest head of deer antlers in the world is that in a San Antonio curio shop—a buck shot in Texas with 78 points (and the picture's there to prove it); that the tarantula is vastly overrated in viciousness—it is very timid, practically blind, can't jump anything like its reputed 20 feet, and if it bit you there would be only the slightest feel of a pin-prick and no noticeable after effects; that the 12 or 18 new-born opossums would not fill a teaspoon—18 of them weigh only one-fifteenth of an ounce; that jack rabbits have been paced by motorcycles going 45 or 50 miles an hour, and that a frightened toad (really a lizard) actually squirts a fine stream of blood three or four feet from little pouches in their eyelids.

These are but conspicuous items from a nature-study book which is continuously honest, intelligent and interesting. The black-and-white and the full-color illustrations are especially good.

CHARLES FRANCIS COE'S "G Man" (Lippincott, $2) was a great disappointment. I'd read it in the Saturday Evening Post, and wonder now why I gave it the patience. Time was when Mr. Coe turned out swift and exciting yarns about bootleggers and gangsters, but with a crusading passion for exposition rather than story-telling he has made his latest book a lightly fictionized resume of the plight of the illegal whisky maker after repeal and the methods of the Government in eliminating him. Interesting, to be sure, but one can get the picture in Courtney Ryley Cooper with less bother of learning names and following a rather stiff plot.

"One-Eye" Zigo splits with his erstwhile lieutenant, Rap Covani—the former to keep on with his distillery on a pig farm, the latter to try what he thinks will be better luck with robberies, kidnappings, and the general playful activities of gangsterdom. Then the G men begin to put the fear of God into one after another of the clan, and finally the public enemies are vanquished. The best going in the book lies in the sections which show the crooked lawyers and politicians in action.

Mr. Coe knows his gangsters, plain enough, but I wish he had made this more high-tensioned and enthralling as a story.

DETECTIVE blue ribbon of the month goes to Richard Wormser's "The Communist's Corpse" (Smith & Haas, $2). It is a heads-up, lively tale, distinguished above all by the vigor and interest of the characters.

Perhaps you remember Erika Strindberg, the tall, awkward Swedish girl who has more brains in her little finger than the New York detective force (as painted here) can muster in its whole force, who is implacably devoted to lost causes, and who is one of the most likeable characters in detective fiction. She bloomed in Mr. Wormser's first book, "The Man with the Wax Face," and now she goes charging along through this splendid yarn.

A wealthy play boy and importer is murdered, and a former Communist is pretty generally supposed to be the murderer—at least by the police. As one of the party workers Erika becomes interested in his defense, and then, as events come tumbling along, she finds that she herself is in something very closely resembling hot water. Getting herself out of trouble, removing the pathetic little former Communist from suspicion, and putting her finger on the real murderer in a grand finale courtroom scene makes this a tale to bet one's shirt on.

Mr. Wormser treats his readers right, and we must respond in kind.

Carol and Otto May Meet

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 29.—The Heimwehr newspaper, Oester Reichische Abendzeitung, today banner-lined a story that King Carol of Roumania and Archduke Otto, Hapsburg pretender to the throne of Austria, may have a personal meeting soon.

The paper said its information came from Roumanian sources. It added the plan was to have the King and Otto meet alone without advisers, with the place and time held in the strictest secrecy.

No responsible monarchist leader admitted knowing of any such proposed meeting.

Dormant Geyser Spouts

Senate Passes 125 Measures In Short Order

Minor Bills Are Enacted Speedily; Proposal on Firearms Blocked.

By the Associated Press.

Momentarily clear of major legislation, the Senate in a burst of speed yesterday passed 125 minor bills in a little more than four hours.

Many were unimportant; some only private relief measures. But among the avalanche were a few of general interest, including one authorizing a 40-hour-week in the postal service.

Several anti-crime measures also were included, but action was blocked on the most important—regulation of interstate commerce in firearms—by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

Despite its swift work yesterday, the calendar of small bills was not cleaned up and the Senate will continue work on them today.

3-Day Recesses Forecast.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, said that when the calendar is swept clean, the Senate probably would take three-day recesses until more urgent measures are ready.

The Senate bill reducing from 12 to 6 per cent the interest on delinquent Federal taxes was passed yesterday. The measure was described by the Treasury as intended to relieve small taxpayers forced into delinquency by hard times.

An anti-crime bill to make a husband or wife of an accused person a competent witness in any criminal proceeding brought under United States law also was sent to the House.

Another measure passed would expedite extradition by abolishing appeals on writs of habeas corpus after the writ had been dismissed.

Work for 10,000 Provided.

The House bill to provide a 40-hour week in the postal service, which now goes back to the House for action on Senate amendments, would cost an estimated $22,000,000 a year and give permanent work to 10,000 substitute postal employes.

Legislative problems are becoming more and more complex. So the Senate passed a House bill providing for distribution to all Congress members of a revised edition of Hinds Parliamentary Precedent.

By the United Press.

The Senate yesterday voted to reward New York City for helping the Union in the Civil War.

A bill passed in the upper chamber authorizes payment of $784,143.75 for "enrolling, subsisting, clothing, supplying, arming, equipping, paying and transporting troops employed in aiding to suppress the insurrection against the United States in 1861 to 1865."

Stocks Register Highs for 1935

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—Without the aid of any special news stimulation, the stock market gave another bullish demonstration today that lifted many issues to new highs for the year or longer.

The equities list apparently derived a considerable part of its encouragement from a brisk rally in the recently lagging rails. In addition, signs of expanding business and industry were becoming more pronounced.

Renewed optimism for equities swelled the turnover on the New York Stock Exchange to 1,751,170 shares, the largest aggregate since May 28. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks stepped up .8 of a point to 47.2, a new top for 1935.

Among the best share performers, at "new highs," were Pacific Lighting, up $3.25 at $39.12; American Telephone, up $2.25 at $131.75; United States Steel, up $1.37 at $43.50; Western Union, up $1.12 at $42; Bethlehem Steel, up $1.62 at $37.62; Westinghouse, up $2 at $85; Allied Chemical, up $3 at $162; Santa Fe, up $1.62 at $57; Coca-Cola, up $2 at $228; Peoples Gas, up $1.87 at $37.87, and Johns-Manville, up $1.50 at $84.

Fletcher Asks Public to Stop The New Deal

said as much—that the Republicans would welcome President Roosevelt taking the leadership in a fight next year to broaden Federal authority under the commerce clause of the Constitution. Many Republicans privately contend that their only prospect of victory next year is for the President to precipitate such a fight.

Meanwhile reports that Democratic leaders had met and turned thumbs down on Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, much to the chagrin of one Cabinet officer, brought a series of denials yesterday from Democratic chieftains. The report, published yesterday, was to the effect that a supreme effort would be made to defeat Borah in Idaho next year when he comes up for reelection.

Farley Issues Denial.

Postmaster James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee and named as the leader of the reported "Borah must go" meeting, reached at Salt Lake City, denied there had been such a meeting or such a decision. He pointed out that since Borah was Republican the Democrats would be "justified in doing all they can to defeat Borah." He said he thought the prospects of Gov. C. Ben Ross of Idaho to succeed Borah were good.

Emil Hurja, assistant to the Democratic chairman, characterized the report of the meeting as "just plain bunk." He said there was "no such meeting and no such decision." Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, through the national committee, issued a statement denying any meeting to decide on steps to decapitate Borah politically.

Lewis pointed out that whenever Borah has been a candidate he has had a Democratic opponent and assumed he would have one next year. But, he said, the Idaho Democracy was "quite competent to choose its own candidate and the National Democratic organization reserves to itself the right to support the Democratic candidate as is the natural course."

Whatever may be the accuracy of the report that the New Deal high command had decided to make a special effort to defeat Borah next year, publication of the story brought the Idahoan's liberal colleagues in the Senate—Republican and Democratic—on the run to defend him.

Wheeler Backing Borah.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, announced he was ready to go into Idaho and campaign for Borah at the drop of the hat. Other liberals expressed a similar readiness. Publication of the story had the effect of increasing the hostility of the progressive bloc to Farley, who has been particularly in their disfavor since he went out of his way against the late Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico.

Fletcher, in his radio talk, contended that "one by one the Roosevelt experiments are failing—failing not only to produce results, but failing to meet the acid test of constitutionality."

"Now that the New Deal is failing to bring about recovery, to reduce unemployment and generally to work its magic wonders," the Republican chairman asserted, "the Roosevelt Administration is looking for a scapegoat and thinks it has found it in the Constitution. This covert, but soon to be open, attack on our basic law is even more dangerous and menacing than the crazy patchwork of laws and decrees which has gone by the name of the New Deal, bad as they were and are."

He argued that the Roosevelt remedies for the depression "have proven far worse than the disease" and held that the "costly short-cut to Utopia has led us nowhere except to a realization of its futility." This was not realized last year, he said, which, he added, explains the overwhelming New Deal victory in the congressional election.

He maintained that because most of the New Deal measures, in effect or pending in Congress, "will not square with the fundamental law of our government" the Roosevelt Administration has decided that "constitutional barriers to 'planned economy' are to be removed," because, he added, "they stand in the way of a centralized, socialistic state, governed without restraint or limit, by a President and a subservient Congress."

He contended there was no doubt whatever that "if the safeguards of the Constitution are removed, all subsequent congresses will be subservient to the Executive," for the reason that no Congress, however independent and self-respecting, "could legislate for the daily needs and control the lives of our widespread citizenry."

Predictions of Strategy.

"Should the New Dealers succeed in fomenting sufficient dissatisfaction and opposition to the Constitution to bring about its change," Fletcher predicted, "the barriers can be pushed aside and the things which the Administration has tried unsuccessfully and indirectly to do might then be accomplished."

He contended that "either the Constitution must give way to the New Deal or the New Deal must give way to the Constitution" and that, he indicated, would be the forthcoming issue. President Roosevelt "desires to push the New Deal over or through the Constitution," he argued, pointing out in substantiation of this contention the President's May 31 press conference when he projected his "horse and buggy" phrase in pointing out what he regarded as the implications of the Supreme Court's Schechter decision.

On that occasion the President had an opportunity, Fletcher asserted, to uphold the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court, but instead of doing so he turned away and showed "clearly his preference for the New Deal."

Also sustaining this contention, Fletcher argued, was the President's action "in ordering Congress to pass a batch of laws which, to say the least, are of doubtful constitutionality and recognized as such even by the President himself."

Doubts Letter Quoted.

He contended that the President's letter to Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, urging the Ways and Means Committee not to permit "doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation" fully indicated Mr. Roosevelt's purpose.

"It shocked the American people," Fletcher said, "that a President of the United States, who has sworn to uphold the Constitution, should advise a member of Congress, also sworn to uphold the Constitution, to pass a bill about which there is reasonable doubt as to its constitutionality."

In conclusion Fletcher said the Republican Party believed with Abraham Lincoln that "the people of these United States are the rightful masters of both Congress and courts—not to overthrow the Constitution, but to overthrow the men who pervert the Constitution."

"The New Deal seeks to pervert or subvert the Constitution," he asserted. "We stand ready to meet this challenge. The election next year will be one of the most important in American history. The fundamental issues are becoming clear. They will transcend party lines. The Republican Party welcomes the aid and support of every patriotic man and woman in this struggle to preserve our form of government and our free institutions."

Mountains Call Society From Beach

Change of Altitude Found to Be Invigorating by Washingtonians.

Randall Hagners Will Spend Rest of Season at Saranac.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Many members of Capital society who have spent the month of July at some beach resort, where their days are spent fishing, sailing or just lying in the warm sands and swimming in the surf, will go to the mountains for the remainder of the summer. The seaside is splendid for a time, but those who live in Washington, which is practically sea level, often find that a change of altitude for a part of the season is most invigorating.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, who with their son, Randall, jr., and their daughters, Marguerite and Isabella, have been at Rehoboth Beach, Del., for the past month, will leave this week for Saranac Inn, N. Y., where they have a cottage, and will remain there until the early autumn. The Hagner family has taken the beach life seriously, all of them, with the possible exception of Mr. Hagner, being exceedingly fond of surf bathing. Miss Marguerite, who is a tall, handsome blonde girl of sub-debutante age, resembling her aunt, Mrs. Norman James, of Baltimore, the former Miss Belle Hagner, one-time social secretary at the White House, is an excellent swimmer, and Mrs. Hagner spends a large part of each day on the beach, in and out of the water, and playing with their pet spaniel, small and black, and very fond of the sea.

Miss Marguerite and her brother left the beach yesterday for New York where they will visit for a while before going to join the other members of the family at Saranac. There they will enter into the annual Saranac Inn water sports carnival, which includes not only swimming but water polo and canoeing.

In the mountain resort there is also golf and tennis, as well as still-water fishing, horseback riding and long walks over the mountain trails.

The former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, who have been visiting in Canada, are now at the Ausable Club, N. Y., some miles beyond Saranac, where they have taken a cottage for the remainder of the summer. Nearby are the famous Ausable Fur Farms, which people drive from miles around to see. There are raised the finest foxes which will one day adorn milady's winter coat.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, who prefer the mountains for their summer vacation, have been motoring in New England, and now are settled at Bretton Woods, N. H., for the remainder of the season. Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, jr., of New York, also are among those who have taken a cottage at the Ausable Club. They have with them their daughters Helen and Marjory Bruce. Mr. Hughes joins his family for week-ends from New York.

Rinse Returns Natural Sheen To Faded Hair

Preparation Offsets Drying Effect of Sun, Wind; A New Deodorizer.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

"YOU CAN TELL a lady by her hair and nails," once remarked a certain wise man. Although he said it many years ago, it's just as true today as it ever was. Soft, gleaming hair is still one of the quickest ways to a man's heart. Yet, what with permanent waves and curling irons, our hair is too often drab and lusterless. Especially in summer are we inclined to let go. Exposure to sun and wind rapidly drys out the valuable natural oils and when autumn comes one's head is likely to make Medusa's look well - groomed by comparison.

So prepare right now to get to work and do away with those telltale traces of neglect. There's no reason why everyone shouldn't have attractive and well-cared-for locks. What your hair most needs now, if you've exposed it to sun and wind, is a rinse which will bring back the sheen and luster which the elements have chased away. We found the other day a rinse which does this very thing. Don't be alarmed, it's neither a dye nor a bleach. Made of pure, harmless vegetable oils, it won't stain or discolor the scalp. Instead, it has a tinting effect, bringing out and emphasizing the hair's natural color. It's especially good for hair which has been recently dyed, for it tones down and softens its appearance. It chases away streaks as well, adding gleaming highlights and a beautiful luster. This rinse comes in 12 shades, one for every possible variation of color, and sells for only 25 cents.

"SUGGESTIONS for summer Charm and Beauty," a leaflet compiled by Ruth Anne Davis, will be sent to The Washington Post readers on receipt of a 2-cent stamp. This leaflet lists more than 20 cosmetics, and gives the names of the shops where they can be purchased.

Deodorizing Powder.

AT LAST someone has invented a deodorant in powder form! Involving no messary liquids or greasy creams, this deodorant is ideal to tuck away in your suitcase over the week-end or on vacations. Put up in an attractive little pasteboard box, the medicated powder is guaranteed to do away with all unpleasant odors. It stops perspiration temporarily, but does not dry out the skin or clog the elimination of unhealthy wastes. Fragrant and soft, it's just the thing for dusting after a bath. Furthermore, this powder is unique—it's absolutely the only such deodorant of its kind. Sells for 50 cents a box.

Delicate Summer Perfume.

IN SUMMER, the heavier, cloying perfumes should give place to the lighter, dainter eau-de-colognes. A generous sprinkling of these refreshing and cooling colognes will give you a grand lift at the end of a long, hot, day. Delicately scented, their odor is lighter than that of ordinary perfume, which is just what you want these sticky days. A dash or two of cologne before leaving the house in the morning will make it easier to get through the day. And it's grand for cooling fevered brows after a strenuous game of golf or tennis. A downtown store has on sale some generous-sized bottles of a well known kind, which make an ideal going away present, if you can bring yourself to let it out of your hands. In each bottle is a different flower, which is embalmed in the cologne, and looks very alive and realistic floating around. There's a violet in the violet cologne, lilac in the lilac variety. The cologne also comes in carnation and lily of the valley. It costs only $1 a bottle.

Carton Containers.

IS YOUR bathroom or kitchen made unsightly by boxes of soap flakes stuck here and there. To our way of thinking, nothing looks as sloppy as half-opened pasteboard cartons littering shelves and windowsills. There's no need for this any longer, though, for at a local department store you can now buy some little tin containers in which such boxes can be safely tucked out of sight. These containers are attractive enough to do credit to anybody's kitchen. Painted a brilliant green, they are enlivened by gay pink roses clambering up the sides. They should go a long way towards making your bathroom and laundry neat. The price is only $1.

For Painful Sunburn.

THAT STINGING, smarting burn after a day on the beach, when your back and arms are so scorched that even a sheet is painful, no longer need be feared. No matter how severe the burn, you can find immediate relief with a new remedy put out by a well known house. Simply rub this mixture lightly over the inflamed area, and all irritation will vanish magically. This solution also can be used for prickly heat. Costs only 50 cents.

Versatile Mary Cootes Never 'Too Busy' to Learn

who has found the time to become accomplished in many different activities, ranging all the way from riding horseback to playing the guitar. From a portrait drawn by her uncle, F. Graham Cootes.

That's Why 23-Year-Old Alexandrian's Talents Range From Golf to Music and Languages; She Deplores Girls' Waste of Time.

By Dudley Harmon

MISS MARY COOTES, of Alexandria, is a shining example of what a certain sage had in mind when he said, "You can always find time to do the things you really want to do."

Women who say they are too busy for golf, tennis, music, or other activities should take a lesson from Miss Cootes. In her 23 years, she has managed to learn to do the following things:

She is an accomplished musician on the piano and the guitar, playing both equally well.

She is a champion tennis player; she recently won the women's title for the District of Columbia.

The cups she has won in horse shows occupy a whole shelf.

She skis well enough to take part in ski races, and her fancy skating is excellent.

She speaks three languages besides English, and has graduated from college with honors.

Furthermore, Miss Cootes has domestic talents as well. She sews beautifully, and knits all her own sweater suits.

Studied Languages Abroad.

Almost since she can remember, Miss Cootes has been engaged in one or more of these various activities. At 6, she took up toe dancing. When she was only 5, she had her first ride on a horse. Her father, who is an army officer, used to lead her around the grounds of his post on a horse. Her groundwork for foreign languages was laid when her family was stationed in Vienna, where she had ample opportunity to learn both German and French.

Although Miss Cootes has taken some lessons in skiing, golf and music, she has, as she says, just "picked up" her proficiency in swimming, diving and tennis. She learned to execute the most difficult dives simply from watching others. It took great patience and nerve, she said, but she kept on trying anyway. When she was young, she had a few lessons in tennis, but she owes her present skill largely to practice.

The most trying period of Miss Cootes' life came when she attended a European convent where even running was considered indecent. The students were permitted no exercise whatever.

Moderate in Diet Habits.

Miss Cootes attributes her skill in these activities solely to the fact that she is fond enough of "doing things" to go out and learn how. She gives some credit to the fact that although she smokes and drinks, she does so in moderation. She eats surprisingly little for one so active. Her breakfasts never consist of more than orange juice, toast and coffee, and for lunch she considers a salad and a glass of milk sufficient. She gets about 6 hours sleep a night.

When asked how she found time in school and college to keep up and develop her manifold activities, Miss Cootes replied:

"Anyone who really wants to can find time to do just what I've done. I think women are inclined to waste too much time as it is. I remember that in college my friends would invariably stop by a drugstore on their way home from class and sit and talk, or sometimes just sit. Or they would gather in one another's rooms and lie and stare at the ceiling for hours on end, without saying a word. And if that isn't wasting time, what is?

Maps Out Days in Advance.

"I always preferred to fill my time with doing things, instead of just sitting. I map out my days in advance, so that every minute is taken care of. I make a tennis date, I buy a concert ticket, I make an appointment for a fitting, all with just enough time between engagements to allow me to get from one to another without that unpleasant rush feeling. Wasn't it Arnold Bennett who wrote "How to Live on 24 Hours a Day?" Anyway, the author of this book shows how much more can be gotten out of life if one fills every moment with some interesting activity."

For the benefit of those who are wondering if there is anything under the sun which Miss Cootes does not do, and do well, we announce that she has one vulnerable spot. She can't draw worth a dime.

Hammerfest Club Formed.

The International Federation of Business and Professional Women now has a branch in the northernmost town in the world. Formation of a Business and Professional Women's Club in Hammerfest, Norway, close to the Arctic Circle and the North Cape, is announced by Froken Nanna With, international membership chairman. The club will be affiliated with the Norwegian Federation of Business and Professional Women, second largest federation in Europe, with 23 member clubs.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Can you and will you give me a few suggestions on a certain campaign I'm planning?

There's a certain very good looking bachelor in the office in which I work who is now in his thirties and, apparently determined to remain single. I have been widowed less than a year and ordinarily what he said or did wouldn't worry me. But because of something that happened, friends of mine in the office have put me up to this trick.

• • • •

He recently graduated from a local university and in a spirit of well-wishing I sent him a congratulatory card. I neither received the card back, nor did I have any acknowledgment of its receipt, which I thought odd. Then a few weeks ago I heard that he had said he wasn't going to thank me for this card because he thought I was pursuing him. At first I was indignant. But this little group I know suggested that I really make him think I'm gunning for him. They say they'd like to see him worried in this direction; he's so sure of himself. A little of the Old Nick entered into me and I decided to take up their suggestion.

• • • •

But I'm all at sea as to how to proceed. I've never before in all my life pursued a man. In fact, I was principally concerned with avoiding men, and met and became engaged to my husband (practically the only beau I ever had) through an accident. I wanted a career and believed that careers and marriage don't mix and, seeing how hard a time my mother had with a large family, I decided I didn't want the same thing. So, you see, I'm not at all sure of what to do to worry this man.

• • • •

Will you give me some suggestions? I want to do this mostly in the office, where everyone can see and enjoy. I'm sure the boss won't mind, so long as I don't deliberately neglect my work, and I really think he'd get as big a kick out of it as the others. Of course, the ladies who put me up to this know what is going on. But this man doesn't, and is now away on sick leave. I want to have all my plans ready when he comes back.

Will you help me? I'd certainly appreciate it. E. C. P.

Beware of Acting Fool.

DEAR E. C. P.: The only suggestion I feel called upon to make, with regard to this campaign you're planning, is: Forget it. Has it occurred to you that "the ladies who put you up to this" may be executing as much of a practical joke against you as you expect to execute against the "very good looking young bachelor?"

• • • •

Don't you realize that however innocently prankish her motives, a woman recently widowed might be making a consummate fool of herself in seeking publicity to pursue and embarrass a matrimonially eligible man who has already expressed distaste for her attentions? What makes you think this man would be "worried" if he thought you were "gunning for him?" I can imagine his being irritated, annoyed, disgusted, perhaps contemptuous, but I can not conceive of his being "beset by . . . care and anxiety" as to either his presumable predictment or your own.

• • • •

A man might worry if pursued by a woman who was dangerously attractive to him; or he might worry if inexorably pursued by some woman who had a certain moral claim on his consideration, through past association; but certainly he has no particular cause for worry when some woman whom he scarcely knows, and whose attentions he has never encouraged, decides to make a fool of herself over him.

• • • •

It might be well to ask yourself honestly whether the idea of this campaign originated in the minds of your confreres, or in your own mind? Whether the plan appeals to you simply as a practical joke, or as a means of giving expression to a suppressed desire to make an aggressive conquest of this man? Perhaps his failure to take notice of you is driving you to consider trying childishly exhibitionistic methods of compelling his attention.

Whatever the truth concerning the origin of the plot, as it stands it is not only extraordinarily sophomoric in concep, but in decidedly bad taste besides. I beg of you: forget it. M. H.

Women Head Many Families On Rural Relief

FERA Survey Discloses One-Eighth of Groups are Matriarchal.

WOMEN ARE HEADS of about one-eighth of all rural relief households, a study by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration shows.

These women, whose average age is 50 years, have been left to take care of families numbering on the average four persons. More than one-fourth of the women have children less than 16 years old, one-fifth have aged dependens and some have both types of dependents. Only about one-fifth are without either old people or children to look after.

These rural relief households headed by women constitute an especially difficult problem, according to Corrington Gill, assistant Federal Emergency Relief Administrator.

Possess Limited Resources.

"They represent a group more handicapped than the average because they possess very limited resources and because the household so frequently contain no employable males," said Mr. Gill.

More than two-thirds of the women at the head of relief households were not accustomed to working at regular employment and the loss of the normal bread-winner left them without any occupation to fall back on.

The survey showed that about one-twelfth of non-relief rural households were headed by women. The women heads, who were working, were not much better off financially than the totally jobless. Most of them were farming or employed at domestic service. Their earnings averaged only $13 a month, and many of those who were farming had no cash income at all. While employment in domestic and personal service had declined by one-third since 1929, the number of women heads of relief households attempting to operate farms had increased by one-fifth.

Debt Average Is Low.

A study was made of the assets and liabilities of the relief households with female heads. Very few were found to own livestock and that in small numbers. As for debts, they were a luxury which these households could not afford. Without assets they could get little or no credit. About two-fifths owed nothing at all and those who had debts owed an average of only $380 each. Compared with these figures were those for relief households with men at the head. Six out of seven of such households on relief owed money and their average indebtedness was $514.

Families in which women were left to assume responsibilities were found more frequently among Negroes and other races, chiefly Mexican, than among white, and more frequently among foreign-born whites than among native whites. The greater difficulties that less favored racial groups have in holding their families together in times when jobs are scarce was cited by Mr. Gill as one factor accounting for the greater proportion of broken families among such groups on the relief rolls. Mr. Gill also pointed out that households with employable persons are removed from the relief rolls during the work season in the South and Southwest, a fact which would cause the Negro and Mexican relief populations to show high proportions of households with women heads at harvest time when the survey was made.

Pointers Are Given To Brighten Room

IF A ROOM is dark and dreary, a new window will often do wonders for it. A room that looks out on a covered porch frequently needs additional lighting. This may be accomplished by cutting a window in the side wall which is not surrounded by a porch.

A child's nursery having two windows facing a veranda can be successfully lightened by this means. White woodwork and a light paper also will add to the brightening of the room.

Paris Swelters As Stylists Plan Winter Modes

Sleek, Sophisticated Lines and Full Skirts Among Evening Designs.

By the United Press.

PARIS, July 29.—World famous French couturiers gathered their staffs of designers, cutters, furriers and milliners together today while Paris suffered under a scorching sun, to begin turning out scores of creations which will take the fashion world by storm this winter.

Mannikins returned from early vacations to stand patiently while harassed couturiers draped new creations about their slender forms. Little midinettes or sewing girls have stitched away in the heat on heavy woolens and have spent long hours over iron boards smoothing away last wrinkles with heavy flat-irons.

The earliest collections have been shown to a world of anxious buyers and curious fashion writers. Next winter's fashions will include:

The ever-popular Parisian black for day-time wear. Tailored woolens for street wear and dressier silk crepes for afternoon. The dead black is relieved frequently by touches of white. Each couturier is promoting a special color characterizing his house during the coming season.

Evening silhouettes are variable, ranging from sleek, molded sophisticated lines to the youthful, full-skirted movement. Bouffant skirts are less predominant as heavier winter materials are not well adapted to frills.

White furs, especially ermine and fox, promise to be popular for evening wraps. For daytime, flat furs which have been dyed unusual tones will make up entire coats and will trim suits and cloth coats of a matching shade.

Hats are as variable as evening clothes. They will run in all sizes. The general trend is off-the-face with halo effect brim. Sometimes a bandeau extends under the brim over the forehead. The combination of felt and velvet is noticeable everywhere.

Patients Received For Week-End Stay Under Hospital Plan

BUSINESS and working people who wish to lose little or no time from their jobs and the pay roll now can make week-end visits to the hospital by subscribing to the 3-cents-a-day plan of the Associated Hospital Service of New York, according to Dr. J. F. Kimball, of Dallas, Tex. Dr. Kimball introduced the plan in Dallas in 1929.

"In Dallas," he said, "we have observed a distinct tendency to come in for the week-end, or if a more serious condition is present, the patient comes in for a ten-day stay covering two week-ends."

Locomotor Paralysis May Be Arrested

Stabbing Pains in Legs Are Early Symptoms, Cutter Says.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE may think of the spinal cord as composed of a bundle of nerves that carry messages from the brain to the muscles and organs of the body. These nerves are the figurative wires that pull the muscles and make them move.

Let us see how the will governs our actions. The thought comes: "I will walk in the garden." As long as it is merely a thought nothing happens—not a muscle contracts. But the moment you put your desires into action—that is, send messages to the muscles—scores of them contract and you rise from a chair, walk to the door, open it, step out, and stroll among the flowers and shrubs. Most of your movements are performed automatically, but at the same time they are governed by the brain. You can stop, sit down, or pick a flower. All of these processes require muscular action and depend upon impulses traveling through the spinal cord. We recognize therefore the vital importance of this structure for the normal functioning of the body.

The most frequent disease of the spinal cord is known as locomotor ataxia or tabes dorsials. Occasionally young persons are afflicted, but the majority of cases are found between the ages of 30 and 50.

Early in the disease the patient will complain of lightninglike pains, first in the thigh and a few minutes later in the foot. They stab like a knife and occur in crops. As a rule they are rapidly repeated, the several stabs succeeding one another in the course of a second or two. Sometimes these paroxysms last for a few hours and then cease for several days. The area in which they are chiefly manifest may be no larger than the palm of the hand, and between attacks the skin over the part is frequently tender to the touch.

Some patients will state that the onset of the pain is provoked by a draft of air, a change of weather, or even a cold drink. In the early stages, while these symptoms rarely appear during active exercise, the individual may be compelled to stop suddenly because of the overpowering paroxysm. The lower limbs and the trunk are most frequently affected, although the knee and ankle joints may be involved. Not infrequently these manifestations are mistaken for rheumatism or neuritis.

Another important symptom is the loss of sensation in the skin, which may be determined by a pin prick. This is probably the most common, most definite, and most characteristic sign of tabes. It is observed with the greatest frequency on the skin of the feet, the inner side of the legs, the trunk, and the inner border of the forearms.

Agonizing pain in the abdomen, known as a "gastric crisis," is a perplexing symptom. The abdominal wall may be rigid and there may be vomiting. Sometimes the attacks resemble acute or chronic indigestion or the diagnosis may be gastric or duodenal ulcer. Because of the violent nature of the pain, abdominal operations are now and then performed. This means that any acute abdominal pain occurring in middle-aged persons should be carefully analyzed. If a loss of skin sensitivity is found, great caution should be exercised before surgical procedures are undertaken.

Once locomotor ataxia has been recognized treatment should be begun. Much can be done to delay or even arrest the destruction of spinal cord cells and expert management will be required. The condition is one in which comfort and reasonable efficiency may be preserved for years with full cooperation on the part of patient and physician.

There are more little helpful Hannahs in the way of kitchen gadgets that you can shake a stick at. Here is a promising group of 16 small tricksters that will keep you singing while you work. For convenience in identifying the articles described today, we have numbered them to correspond to the picture at the bottom of this page.

To Trim a Pie.

Number 2 on the list is a pie crimper. This little gadget is made of polished wood and is guaranteed not to leave splinters in the edge of your pie. It runs around the untidy rim of a pie and, presto, the edge becomes beautifully fluted. Price, 15 cents.

For Stringing Beans.

Number three looks like a dangerous implement and it is, but only to a long, skinny, stringy bean. The razor-sharp blade nips off the ends of your bean. Coring Grapefruit.

Number 4 answers to the name of a grapefruit corer and is vicious only to the point of cutting out the heart of a grapefruit with two deft strokes. Price, 50 cents.

Inexpensive Mixer.

Number 5 is a wooden batter mixer that revolves as the handle is pumped up and down. It is easily manipulated and because the beater is of wood it will not scratch the surface of your bowls. Price, 50 cents.

Decorates Cookies.

Number 6 is a wooden rolling pin that etches pictures on your cookies as it rolls. There are three sizes. The one illustrated is the smallest. Price, 98 cents.

Corn Holders.

For the Bride.

Number 9 is a miniature beater that works up and down. It is ideal for mixing drinks and whipping up a lone egg. It is ideal for the cook who ordinarily prepares foods for one or two persons. Price, 49 cents.

Vegetable Curler.

Number 10 is a vegetable curler. There is no more trick to working it than applying a corkscrew to a bottle. It can be used on turnips, potatoes, carrots or other hard vegetables. Price, 19 cents.

On Laundry Day.

Varied Uses.

Number 12 is a sort of wooden tomahawk. It will pound the toughest steak into tenderness. It may also be used to crack ice. Price, 29 cents.

It Slices Tomatoes.

Thirteen is a lucky number. This saw tooth knife slices tomatoes to perfection and the metal bar below the teeth guides the knife so that the slices will always be of uniform thickness. Price, 29 cents.

A Rubber Spatula.

Number 14 is a combination cake beater and spatula constructed of wood and soft rubber. It beats your batter without marring the bowl and scrapes every clinging bit of batter from bottom and sides of the bowl. Price, 10 cents.

For Molding Butter.

Fifteen is a miniature butter mold. Fill the hollow at the bottom with butter. Then press down the knob at the top and your butter will roll out in a shapely ball with a picture on the top. Price, 29 cents.

Makes Butter Curls.

You have seen trim little butter curls at fashionable hotels. They are no trouble to make with gadget number 16. You merely scrape this hooked object across the surface of a large piece of butter. Price, 69 cents.

Even the modest budget can afford these helpful kitchen gadgets, as the prices indicate, and a note to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Post, will reveal where you can buy them in Washington. Or telephone NA. 4200, and while you are calling, ask also for Miss Duncan's new cookery leaflets.

Potatoes and Pimientoes.

Creamed potatoes look attractive and are tasty if chopped pimientoes are added to them. Take one pimientoa jar of them costs only 10 cents, and the remainder will keep in the refrigerator—and cut in small pieces. Add this to the cream sauce just before stirring it in with the potatoes.

DOROTHEA DUNCAN,

who conducts The Post food columns, is extending the scope of her activities with a new weekly food page. In addition to the suggestions given here, Miss Duncan answers questions relating to food and home management; she also has prepared three helpful bulletins for Post readers, described elsewhere on this page.

Oven Dinners Save Both Labor And Money in Summer Weather

By Dorothea Duncan.

A cry of protest greets the suggestion of oven dinners for hot weather, but on second thought they have unlimited possibilities. The actual preparation of an oven meal can be accomplished before the oven is lighted. Then when the food is finally tucked into the oven to bake, you can escape to a cool retreat in some other part of the house. This type of meal saves dishwashing, too, because one oven-resisting dish serves as pan and serving dish as well.

An oven dinner once or twice a week cuts down the budget noticeably, for bits of leftover vegetables and meats that look as though they will never again have a convincing moment can be combined with a sauce that blends them tastefully, then placed in a casserole to warm in the oven. The next time you have several leftover vegetables bind them together with a medium white sauce, using one cup of sauce to two cups of vegetables, place the mixture in a casserole and top with buttered bread crumbs and grated American cheese. Heat the mixture in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) until the cheese is melted and the crumbs are a golden brown 20 to 30 minutes.

VEAL BIRDS WITH VEGETABLES.

Stuffing.

2 tablespoons fat
2 onions
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon minced parsley

Place the two tablespoons of fat and chopped onions in a two-quart oven-resisting casserole, and put in the oven to brown. When onions are well browned, add bread crumbs, salt, pepper and parsley.

Other Ingredients.

1½ pounds veal steak, sliced thin
½ cup dry bread crumbs
1½ cups turnips
1 stalk celery
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup onions
½ cup water or meat stock

Cut meat into pieces about 3 by 5 inches. On each piece place two tablespoons of stuffing. Wrap each piece of meat around stuffing and fasten together with toothpicks; then roll in fine bread crumbs. Dice turnips, onions and celery; place in casserole. Put veal birds on vegetables. Add butter, salt and stock. Bake for one hour at 375 degrees Fahrenheit and serve at the table in the same oven-resisting dish.

Fewer dishes need to be washed when a meal is cooked and served in the same utensil. Miss Duncan describes the possibilities of oven dinners for hot weather in the accompanying article.

Household Hints

Clean sand or pebbles in the bottom of a vase of flowers will weight it down sufficiently to prevent it blowing over in a summer breeze.

• • • •

If playing cards stick together from constant use, rub talcum powder on each one and they will slide almost like new.

• • • •

When preparing paraffin to seal jam or jelly, melt it in the top of a double boiler. This will prevent the possibility of it catching fire.

• • • •

An apple cut in two and placed in the bread of cake box keeps the contents from drying, or sometimes will even restore the freshness to slightly stale bread or cake.

• • • •

Prepared Foods Are Short Cuts To Tasty Meals

Many New Products Appear in Cans, Cooked or Ready to Bake.

Just around the corner at your grocer's you will find cans and boxes, whose contents are worth investigating, for they are new products which ingenious manufacturers have devised to make a skilled cook of any amateur. Some of them come already cooked; others contain mixtures ready to bake. And most of them are excellent for the emergency shelf.

You have heard tell how the very smell of hot gingerbread brings a suitor to his knees. Don't wait until the weather is cooler to see if it works. Get a package of already prepared gingerbread, mix and invite him home to dinner tonight.

All you have to do to prepare the miracle dish is dump the contents into a bowl, add the amount of water called for on the box, give the mixture a few strokes with a spoon and turn it into a greased pan to bake in a moderate oven. The result? Try it out for yourself and see how it works.

If you are having friends from Boston next Saturday night you can make them feel at home by serving dark slices of delicious brown bread that comes ready baked in a can, with or without raisins.

For sandwiches that are different, use date bread that can be turned out of a can in a neat little roll. This is an excellent product to keep on your pantry shelf in case of an emergency. Spread with cream cheese and walnuts, plus a cooling beverage, this is all that you will need in the way of evening refreshments for casual callers.

It is hardly necessary any longer to know how to stir up a cake. It is far simpler, in fact, when you want a batch of cup cakes to ask your grocer for a box of prepared cup cake mix. To this mix you add milk and one egg and any desired flavoring. The recipe can be varied with chocolate or spice or any desired flavoring. Each package makes 12 good-sized cup cakes.

The brand names of these and other "ready-made" food products will be supplied on request. This list is an invaluable aid in marketing. To obtain a copy, send a stamp to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post.

Butcher Offers Tempting Ideas

Mr. Douglas of "Park and Shop" Suggests Cold Roast in Summer.

Steaks, chops, roast, meat loaf. We've had them all this week, and what can we have now? That problem confronts many a woman who steps into the butcher shop harassed by a limited knowledge of meats. If she asks for any of these familiar standbys, the butcher obligingly complies; but if she frankly confesses her bewilderment, and asks for advice, the variety of his suggestions will be nothing short of amazing.

For your butcher is an expert. He has served long years in his trade and the wise shopper will take advantage of the advice he can offer.

If you are in the vicinity of 3513 Connecticut avenue, for instance, stop in at the Sanitary Grocery Co's. Park and Shop and ask for Mr. Douglas, manager of the store. He knows his meats from A to Z.

Roasts Served Cold.

The accompanying picture shows Mr. Douglas in action, preparing a prime rib roast of beef for Miss Dorothea Duncan, The Washington Post food expert. This, according to Mr. Douglas, is only one suggestion for a roast that can be boned and rolled and then roasted and sliced cold. If rib roast is too high for your pocketbook or doesn't happen to suit your fancy, he can suggest several other types of roasts that may be boned and rolled, making them attractive to serve either hot or cold. A leg of lamb with the hip bone and large joint removed is one suggestion; a shoulder of veal with the blade and backbone removed making a round roast after it has been rolled is another, and still another is a loin of pork which has been boned and rolled. These four suggestions, according to Mr. Douglas, make the most attractive roasts for summer if you like to roast your own meat and then serve it sliced cold.

But perhaps you don't like to bother with a roast in the summer time. In that case, Mr. Douglas has many other suggestions in his refrigerator. Assorted cold cuts might be the answer, and if you think that just because most cold cuts have the same pinkish red background they are all the same you are highly mistaken. Take your butcher's word for it.

Many Cold Cuts.

That loaf with a long slice of pickle and a round of lemon imbedded in the top is head cheese and the meat used is pork. Then there is a cold pressed loaf that combines chicken, pork and veal. Bologna might be made of veal or have ham and beef as a background and some of the veal bologna has pimiento added for flavor. There is another pinkish loaf called pep loaf; this is made of ham, and still another called luxury loaf, but this one has a veal background and is dotted with pimiento and pistachio nuts.

There are more on the list: Real Italian salami, liverwurst, roast fresh ham, cooked tongue, Taylor ham, which is excellent fried for breakfast; Thuringer—a hard, spicy summer sausage, and, last, but not least, cooked ham and Virginia style baked ham.

Specially Made Foods Cater to Baby's Whims

Theoretically, a baby when he has reached the stage where he must have solid foods, cannot discriminate between flavors and will eat anything that is given him. Many a mother knows that this is not so. Even at 6 months, some babies have a distinct aversion to a certain flavor. Canned, strained vegetables, specially prepared for babies, offer a choice to suit any taste.

If baby does not like spinach, try him on carrots; or if he has an aversion to carrots, offer him the soup. For so long as he has a varied diet, omission of any particular vegetable will not harm him. And the canned preparations, prepared under the most sanitary conditions, offer him a balanced diet, and save his mother's time and effort.

Addition of Ginger Root Gives Fine Flavor to Summer Drinks

A new idea to you perhaps because it is so old that it has been buried in grandmother's cook-book for years is the addition of ginger root to cooling drinks for summer. The sirup from preserved ginger root, which is put up in little jars, adds a pleasant flavor to many beverages. Ground ginger can also be used to add spice to a cool, refreshing beverage. Try these:

PINEAPPLE-GINGER.

3 cups water
2 tablespoons ginger root
½ cup sugar
¼ cup honey
½ cup lemon juice
1 cup crushed pineapple
4 cups unsweetned pineapple juice

Simmer together the water and ginger root for 25 minutes. Strain, add the rest of the ingredients and let stand until cold. Chill and serve.

GINGER CUP.

1 tablespoon ground ginger
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
½ cup sugar
½ cup strained lemon juice
Stoned cherries, lemond rind and mint.

Tie the ginger and grated rind in a piece of cheesecloth and drop into 1 quart of cold water. Bring to a boil and add the sugar, stirring until dissolved. Cool, add lemon juice, remove the cloth bag, and chill the drink. Serve with three or four stoned cherries, bits of lemon rind, and a sprig of mint in each glass.

Dorothea Duncan has compiled suggestions for cooling summer beverages in a bulletin available to Post readers. Send a 2-cent stamp and your request for the bulletin, "Summer Beverages," to Miss Duncan, in care of The Washington Post.

TO OPEN CAN

To spare your fingers in opening a sardine can with a key, after inserting the key, turn it two or three times, then slip an ice pick or other suitable utensil through the loop and continue turning.

Experts Discuss Summer Meats

Roast beef may sound like cold-weather food, but Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Washington Post, and Mr. Douglas, manager of the Sanitary Grocery Co.'s "Park and Shop" on Connecticut avenue, agree that it is delectable in summer. After roasting, the beef is sliced and served cold.

Favorite Recipe For Hot Breads May Win Prize

Twelve $1 Awards Will Be Given Weekly; Grand Prizes Later.

On Christmas Eve, every woman who likes to cook hopes there will be a Mix-Master under the tree for her next morning, for of all the kitchen devices that ingenious manufacturers have provided, none is a greater labor-saver and luxury than this. Christmas is coming early to some woman in The Post territory this year, for a Sunbeam Mix-Master is first prize in a recipe contest that opens today.

The Washington Post and the National Electric Supply Co. will play Santa Claus in providing this luxurious gift for some woman, to be awarded for the best recipe submitted in the next two months. Second prize will be a G. E. Hotpoint Coffee Maker, smartly styled and beautifully designed and guaranteed to make coffee that will delight the fussiest of husbands. The third prize will be a Dominion Sandwich Grill, one of those convenient appliances that adapts itself for cooking eggs, steak, bacon, waffles and other foods as well as sandwiches.

12 Weekly Prizes.

In addition to these three awards to be given at the end of two months, 12 prizes of $1 each will be awarded weekly until the end of the contest. This means that every Post reader has an opportunity of winning a $1 prize, and the chance of being awarded one of the grand prizes at the conclusion of the two-month period. Contestants are invited to submit recipes each week, on the subject assigned, thereby increasing their chances of winning a grand prize.

Quick breads has been selected as the topic of the opening week's contest, for this reason. That famous chef, George Rector, in a recent magazine article contended that making of hot breads is a lost art. We don't believe it. Maryland and Virginia are famous for their corn bread, biscuits and other quick breads. We are convinced that in these neighboring States, as well as in the Capital, women every day are making hot breads as delicious as their grandmothers baked.

The 12 best recipes submitted by Saturday will receive $1 each. All of them will be filed and judged in the final contest for the grand prizes.

Rules Are Simple.

Any quick bread recipe will be accepted. Yeast breads or yeast buns are not included in this classification. The winning recipe may be for muffins, gems, biscuits, either plain or made with fruit or cheese or other flavorsome ingredients. The response should fling a challenge to Mr. Rector's remark that the modern cook does not use hot breads in her summer menus.

The rules of the contest are simple. Anyone may compete except The Washington Post employes. Simply write out your favorite quick bread recipe and mail it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post, by Friday at the latest, as all recipes must be in this office by Saturday morning.

Watch the Tuesday food page in The Post for the announcement of prize winners, and the recipes they submitted. The topic of the second week's contest will be announced at that time. Readers need not submit a recipe each week unless they want to, but the woman who contributes regularly increases her chances of winning one of the weekly prizes.

Your favorite hot bread recipe may win that coveter Mix-Master, or one of the other grand prizes as well as one of the $1 weekly awards.

Dorothea Duncan this week is offering her readers three helpful bulletins: Summer Drinks, Sour Milk and Cream Recipes, and a list of brand names of prepared foods which cut kitchen labor. If you wish any of these leaflets, enclose your request and a stamp for return postage when you submit your recipe.

Bulletins Offered As Aid to Readers

Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, today announces a new series of bulletins for readers. The first three are ready for mailing now.

"Summer Beverages" gives recipes for making cooling drinks that are inexpensive and tasty.

"Sour Milk and Cream Recipes," as its name implies, offers helpful suggestions on a timely subject.

The third bulletin lists the brand names of new food products that come already cooked or ready for baking. Some of these are described on the page today. The bulletin tells what to ask for at your local store.

Any of these leaflets will be mailed on receipt of a stamp. Address Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post.

Serve Fried Tomatoes In Open Face Sandwich

Ripe tomatoes, fried in butter, placed on toast and topped with strips of bacon make a tasty and nourishing open-face sandwich. The tomatoes should be fried in silees in the butter, not dipped in bread-crumbs as fried tomatoes usually are prepared. They will not hold their shape, but the juice will seep into the toast producing a delicious flavor.

Or to make a still heartier meal, melt American cheese and pour the mixture over the tomatoes, before topping with bacon.

HEATING ROLLS

To heat rolls or buns, place in a brown paper bag, sprinkle liberally with water and place in a moderate oven. This will preserve the moisture, instead of drying the bread as placing it in a tin in the oven does.

Latin-American Tour Planned As Trade Spur

D.C. Group Seeks U.S.Loot for Expedition to Cost $3,000,000.

An American trade expedition to Latin-America, such as the Prince of Wales has participated in for Great Britain and such as other countries have sponsored in recent years, is being planned by a Washington organization, American Trade Ships, Inc.

Use of the liner George Washington or the America is contemplated and informal overtures have been made to the Shipping Board Bureau of the Department of Commerce for chartering one of the vessels.

Those in Movement.

Among those listed as ready to be associated with the expedition are Paul Henkel, president of the Society of Restaurateurs and manager of Hotel Ansonia, New York City, to superintend the cuisine and arrange social functions; Frank Darling, who established and operated the observation roof at Rockefeller Center, to take charge of exposition activities; Capt. John F. Milliken, president of the Neptune Association, and president of the licensed officers of America, to serve in an advisory capacity as to maritime operations; Eugene Schoen, decorator and industrial exhibition authority, of New York City, to consult on ship arrangement and exhibit decorations, and Fred Roper, formerly executive secretary of the Democratic national committee, and son of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, to assist in organization arrangements.

"The expedition," it was explained, "will not contemplate fitting out the vessel in the usual manner of exposition with booth-to-booth displays. Either of the ships mentioned can be rearranged to provide 50,000 square feet of floor space, but such space will be used only for articles and commodities not susceptible of being displayed in the more effective manner of actual installation and use. The more desirable method of display will be used by furnishing and equipping suites with appropriate products of the participating manufacturers.

May Take Orders.

"The primary purpose of this expedition is to bring the American producers closer to their distributors and consumers, and by a campaign of education to impress on the Central and South American dealer, consumer and public in general the superiority of American-made articles. The expedition is not to be a sales organization in the sense that direct sales will be solicited, although there will be no prohibition against writing such orders as may be tendered."

The plan calls for sailing from New York, if possible, by December 1, 1935, to assure the best possible weather conditions. The expedition is estimated to cost, aside from the expense to the participants for installation of xhibits and salaries of representatives, approximately $3,000,000.

50,000 Danish Peasants Quit King's Palace After Aid Siege

Premier Promises to Study Their Demands for Farm Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Copenhagen, July 29.—The army of peasants which marched on the king's palace to demand relief prepared to return to home today upon the government's promise to weigh their case.

Until Prime Minister Theodore Stauning received their deputation and assured them the cabinet would consider their plight, the peasants squatted in the courtyard of Amalienborg Palace.

Their ranks estimated at 50,000, they muttered threats of a farm strike and expressed determination not to move until the premier heard their case.

King Christian addressed them from a balcony and expressed hope their justifiable complaints might be acted upon. He reminded them of his position of constitutional monarch and referred them to Premier Stauning.

They cheered the King, but refused to move. When Stauning declined to make any promises, involving, it was said, removal of politicians from administrative posts, especially in agricultural departments, they drew up a resolution of their demands.

The resolution delivered to Stauning sought minimum prices for their produce, reduction of taxes and a new moratorium on their debts.

During a farewell demonstration, after the deputation had been received, a worker addressed the crowd and hinted at further united protests in two weeks unless action is taken on the resolution.

Some of the participants in the march, who were recruited from farmlands throughout Denmark, unobtrusively wore the swastika of Germany and the hammer and sickle of the Soviet.

The cabinet considered the peasants' claims in a three-hour sitting, but no decision is expected before Wednesday, when Parliament is summoned to discuss agricultural problems. It was learned that some of the deputies from the agricultural districts opposed the proposals contained in the peasants' resolution.

Two Cleveland Gunmen Get $20,000 Jewels

Cleveland, July 29 (AP).—Three gunmen today robbed the Berger Jewelry Co. today of loose gems and jewelry on which Leonard Berger, owner, placed a value of "between $10,000 and $20,000."

Berger told police the trio also took approximately $150 in currency.

He said the bandits forced a watchmaker and himself into a rear room at the point of guns and bound and gagged them. They looted the open safe and a cash drawer before escaping in an automobile piloted by a companion who remained at the wheel, Berger said. He said he notified police after struggling free of his bonds.

Roosevelt Designs New Midget Coppers

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday was named the designer of the midget money proposed by the Treasury.

Secretary Morgenthau said the Chief Executive had sketched a square coin for the one-mill piece, while his design for the half-cent coin was "doughnut in character," with a hole in the center.

Copper still was designated as the metal for the half-penny, but aluminum apparently was out as a possible base for the mill. "I can not imagine this Administration manufacturing its currency out of aluminum," Morgenthau said.

The Aluminum Co. of America virtually controls the source of virgin aluminum. Andrew W. Mellon, former Republican Secretary of the Treasury, is a large stockholder. Just now the Treasury is trying to collect from Mellon more than $3,000,000 it claims due on back taxes.

NOW! "AIR-CONDITIONED" AMERICAN GAS

AS the second achievement for its 25th Anniversary, the American Oil Company presents a regular gasoline as new—as modern—and as different as its name—"AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas.

In how it's produced, in what it is, in what it does—"AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas now moves even further ahead of other regular gasolines that have become pretty much alike.

First of all, "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas is a 100% Pure Petroleum Base. Our new refinery with its new processes is able to develop from the raw crudes a regular gasoline with more net energy per gallon and more other desirable qualities than ever before possible.

No acid is used in our refining operations. Most other gasolines are acid-treated. Acid-treating injures anti-knock quality and also leaves traces of acidic compounds in the gasoline.

Further, it hasn't been necessary to add any of the chemicals used in most regular gasolines. The result is a new type of gasoline that offers you things no other regular gas can offer. Here they are:

READ ALL THESE GUARANTEED FEATURES

"AIR-CONDITIONED": Conditioned at refinery to counteract erratic engine tendencies caused by outside temperature and humidity changes. This guarantees uniform and efficient motor performance in any weather.

HIGHER ANTI-KNOCK: By new processes—without acid treatment—in the world's most modern refinery, we obtain naturally from 100% Pure Petroleum Base a higher anti-knock value than other regular gasolines get artificially by the addition of chemicals to bring up anti-knock alone.

MORE MILES: Greater net power and higher anti-knock rating net more miles to the gallon than any other regular gasoline.

"AIR-CONDITION" Your Motor!

Stop at any Yellow and Black American Gas Pump and fill up your tank with "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. Then keep your car "air-conditioned" with this amazing new "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. Even though it costs us more to produce, it is being sold at regular gas price from Maine to Florida and inland by thousands of American dealers and stations.

15 New Cases Of Paralysis AreReported

Virginia Communities Renew Fight on Epidemic.

259 Ill Since June; Second Death Is Listed.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 29.—Virginia communities today intensified their fight on infantile paralysis as 15 new cases were reported to the State health department over the week-end. Cases recorded since June 1 now total 259.

The outbreak centered on Albemarle and Roanoke, but physicians of the State turned their attention on Petersburg, where Dr. A. G. Gilliam, of the U. S. Public Health Service, will supervise the first serum test clinic to be established in Virginia.

Albemarle today contributed 4 of the total of 15 new cases, and Roanoke 1, bringing that city's total to 11. Albermarle's total now stands at 28.

Four counties reported two cases today for the first time—Greene, Lee, Prince William and Prince George. The other seven were distributed as follows: Charlotte, two; Botetourt, one; Coochland, one; Sussex, one; the City of Richmond, one.

No action has yet been taken in Charlottesville or Albemarle County to close theaters, swimming pools or other public places, but a circus scheduled to show there this week has cancelled its engagement. The Farmington Country Club at Charlottesville hac closed its swimming pool, but two public pools are still operating.

Restrictions Issued.

Dr. C. H. Eller, of the Albemarle-Charlottesville Health Board, said no plans are being made for banning public meetings at this time. All Sunday schools, however, are closed.

The Shenandoah Boy Scout camp near Staunton has been closed because of the epidemic, it was said today.

Alarmed by the spread of the disease, Roanoke health officials closed all public playgrounds indefinitely to children under 16, and issued a strong "warning" against children attending movies, Sunday schools, or other gatherings. Closing of the playgrounds to children cancelled all junior activities in the city, including a Mardi Gras August 30.

Second Death Reported.

Albemarle today reported the second death in the current epidemic. At nearby Gordonsville children were forbidden to attend the Piedmont District Assembly of the Christian Church.

Fairfax closed all theaters as a precaution against the disease, and Spotsylvania banned revivals and "protracted" camp meetings.

Other counties formulated similar regulations, Amelia placing restrictions on the sale of foodstuffs and drinks in any but sterilized containers.

Loudoun Prohibits Assembly of Youths

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 29.—In order to control the spread of infantile paralysis into Loudoun County from adjoining areas, the Loudoun County health board, meeting this morning, ordered that no children under 16 shall be admitted to any moving picture show, dance hall, swimming pool, ball park, school, church, Sunday school, or any other place of public entertainment or where any crowds are congregated in the county.

A ban also was put on carnivals, circuses and medicine shows in the county. The orders are effective immediately and will continue in force until further order. One thousand copies of the resolutions will be printed and posted in various sections.

Only one case of the malady has been reported in the county and that is near the Fauquier border line, about 2 miles from Upperville. Among the various events called off is a carnival booked by the Middleburg Athletic Association for this week.

Man Lying in Street Robbed; Three Held

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 29.—Police held three persons, Carrie Johnson, 18; Louise Harris, 27, both of Ashland, Va., and H. A. Tholen, 37, of Hanover County, on robbery charges today. They are accused of taking $900 from John Radford, city engineer, as he lay unconscious on a city street after an accident on June 24.

A fourth prisoner was Harry Larue, 34, employed in the commissary department of the CCC camp at Fort Eustis, Va. Larue, wanted in connection with missing commissary funds, was arrested after he called on the Johnson girl in jail.

Missing Youth's Body Is Sought; Slaying Feared

Waynesboro Boy Vanished 3 Years Ago on Trip Into the Hills.

By the Associated Press.

Waynesboro, Va., July 29.—A three year old mystery was revived here today when Sheriff G. M. Gilkeson began an inquiry into "new developments" which he said indicated Orie Grove, 13, who disappeared September 26, 1932, was murdered and the body hidden in the Sherando neighborhood. The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Grove, of Augusta County.

After questioning a number of residents on farms adjoining that of the Groves, the sheriff ordered that two wells be cleaned out, and started digging operations at a spot where he said he believed the body may lie.

Details of the new evidence were withheld in order not to hinder the probe, Sheriff Gilkeson said.

The Grove boy failed to return from a nut gathering trip into the hills near his home and was given up for lost when a search of several weeks failed to turn up a clue. Police were notified throughout the East, and the father made a number of futile trips in an effort to identify youths answering the general description of his son.

No word of any kind has been received as to the boy's whereabouts. He left a sum of money in his room when he disappeared, wearing old clothes.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 29.—A rule issued Friday against Clarence O. Paugh, notary public under indictment for mail ballot forgery, was dismissed in hustings court this morning by Judge J. L. Almond, jr., when it became known that a mail ballot Paugh was to be questioned about had been delivered to the central registrar, Mrs. Anne Byrd Coleman.

The rule required Paugh to appear and show cause why he should not be jailed for holding in his possession a ballot issued to G. L. Cecil. Mrs. Coleman reported the ballot was mailed in an envelope bearing the time, 11:30 p. m., Friday, about seven hours after the rule was issued.

The special grand jury will meet Thursday at 9:30 a. m., the hour set when adjournment was taken Saturday.

Nice Sounds N. Y. Attitude On Candidacy

Envoy to Visit Hilles as Result of Bay Parley.

Big G. O. P. Delegation Might Control '36 Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 29.—As an aftermath of Gov. Harry W. Nice's week-end cruise with national Republican figures, William P. Lawson, chairman of the Maryland Republican State committee, will go to New York Thursday for a breakfast conference with Charles C. Hilles, Republican national committeeman for New York State.

The invitation is particularly significant in view of Gov. Nice's recent rise to prominence in discussions of possible Republican presidential nominees. The number of New York's votes in the convention also makes the Thursday conference a matter for speculation. Pennsylvania, whose convention delegation likewise is large, was represented on the cruise.

It is no secret here that the matters to be discussed between Hilles and Lawson include Gov. Nice's potentialities as a candidate at the Republican convention next summer. The meeting between the two men was arranged by George de B. Keim, secretary of the national committee, who was included in the guest list of the State yacht Dupont appearance in the range of national political strategy, his trip into Pennsylvania this week is considered to be important. He will leave Friday to go to Hanover, Pa., for a State convention of the Loyal Order of Moose.

On August 11 he will leave for a trip to Toronto, Canada, to address the Knights of Pythias at their convention. The Canadian trip, while out of the country, nevertheless will give him an opportunity to talk to a large number of members of the order who live and vote in this country.

No definite speaking tours have been arranged with these exceptions. However, he has received a number of other invitations, and his office now is trying to arrange his time to accept those possible.

Phoebus, Nice Foe, In Committee Race

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., July 29.—State Senator Harry T. Phoebus, often at odds with Gov. Harry W. Nice, titular and active Republican head in Maryland, came out today with the announcement that he would be in the fight against all comers for Republican national committeeman from the State.

The recalcitrant Somerset County Republican was not daunted by the fact that former United States Senator Ovington E. Weller, now chairman of the public service commission, recently has been elected to the committee post and probably will be a candidate for reelection at the next State convention. Weller, long a Republican wheelhorse in the State, was named to succeed former Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, who resigned to take a semi-judicial position in Washington.

"All that I have to say," proclaimed Phoebus to party leaders gathered at this resort city, "is that the national committeeman ought to come from the Eastern Shore. I am from the Eastern Shore; I am a candidate and I expect to be elected."

Mill Lays Off 4 As Orange, Va., Debates Union

Owners Post Notice About Retaining NRA Wages; Men Disagree.

By the Associated Press.

Orange, Va., July 29.—Four men who were laid off today at the American Silk Mills plant for the remainder of the week assert they are trying to insure retention of NRA wages and hours which they do not believe the mill will enforce. Mill owners have posted a written notice that the "plant is continuing rates in effect at the beginning of the year and will continue to do so," but United Textile Workers Union supporters say it is indefinite as to length of time.

"It is not our intention to cause any trouble whatever," one union backer stated. "We are perfectly within the law and intend to stay so."

The mill has started a petition to organize a welfare committee to combat the union and insure continued operation of the plant.

Employes of the company were urged by local business men to take no notice of efforts of the United Textile Workers to organize them. The workers were told, instead, that it would be to their advantage to form their own company union.

Two men and a woman, organizers for the Textile Workers, were said to have come here to help form an Orange union.

About 200 workers gathered in a mass meeting Saturday night on the Fredericksburg road several miles east of Orange, assertedly for the purpose of forming a local textile workers union.

Staunton Firemen Sorry Samaritans

Can't Collect for Their Runs to Help Neighbors.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 29.—Just what's goining to happen the next time a house outside the corporate limits catches fire and the Staunton fire department is called, is a question that is causing considerable speculation.

For years Staunton firemen have been responding to all calls from residents within a reasonable distance. They have "taken chances" on being remunerated for gasoline and other expenses.

Now that the total of unpaid bills amounts to more than $1,000, the county itself has been asked to compensate the firemen.

Asked to work out some plan for compensating the Staunton fire department—as well as the Waynesboro department—the Augusta supervisors turned "thumbs down" on the suggestion. Because the departments could not give protection to all of the county, they did not feel the taxpayers should be called upon to support protection for a comparatively small area.

Acute Heart Dilation Kills Young Swimmer

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 29.—William Callar, 17, died at the Staunton swimming pool late this afternoon of what Coroner T. M. Perkins termed acute heart dilation caused by overtaxing his heart during an underwater swim. Callar collapsed as he was climbing out of the pool. Artificial respiration failed to restore life.

He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald Callar, of Staunton, his father being a dentist. The parents and one brother survive.

Typhoid Cases Drop.

Richmond, Va., July 29 (AP).—Typhoid fever cases in Virginia so far this year show a decline, Dr. G. F. McGinnis, State epidemiologist, said today. Total cases of typhoid last year numbered 777. Through July 27 this year, 244 cases had been reported. The disease usually reaches its peak during August and September.

Friend Says Burch Seeks Nomination

Virginia Representative to Run for Governor in '37 Primary.

Gov. Peery Noncommittal on Candidacy of Successor.

By the Associated Press.

A flat assertion that Representative T. G. Burch, of Martinsville, would be a candidate for the Virginia Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the primary of 1937 was made yesterday by a close friend who was here from the State on business.

"He will be a candidate and he will be the next Governor," said the spokesman, who is closely identified with Virginia organization politics, but who would not allow himself to be quoted by name.

A suggestion that Burch would be a candidate was made the day after Gov. Peery was inaugurated.

Gov. Peery, here today for a conference with Secretary Ickes on the construction of a road connecting the Shenandoah National Park with the Great Smoky Park, confined his comment on the gubernatorial situation to remarks made in a joking mood.

Asked about Lieut. Gov. James H. Price's recent announcement that he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Gov. Peery replied:

"I can serve only one term, but it seems they are trying to hurry me along. I still have 2½ years as Governor, and you may be sure that I have no intentions of being impeached or dying."

Burch has kept silent upon the question. The Price announcement drew from him only a statement of "interest."

He was not in his office this afternoon for comment.

He was introduced at a meeting on the Northern Neck as "the next Governor of Virginia." Recently he went to New York with the Virginia Press Association on a convention cruise.

Highway Protests Grow in Virginia

Fredericksburg Holds Meeting; Raps Plan.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 29.—The Chamber of Commerce met here tonight and formed plans for the protest they will lodge with the State highway commission when it comes to this city Thursday morning to conduct public hearings on the proposed construction of a $235,000 alternate highway around Fredericksburg.

Stating that the contemplated change in U. S. Route 1 would deprive Fredericksburg of an estimated annual revenue of $1,486,000, C. M. Cowan, committee chairman, urged concerted action on the part of the Chamber of Commerce, the city council and local business interests. He fixed the number of employes who would be affected by the proposed rerouting at 343, with dependents numbering 452.

Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. F. Cole, who has been appointed committee spokesman, said his committee regards the projected highway change as the most important question that has confronted the citizens of Fredericksburg and this section in the past generation.

Staunton Doctor Asks Fever Test of Cattle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 29.—With one case of undulant fever in Staunton, Dr. J. Fairfax Fulton has appeared before city council recommending that every producer of milk distributing within the city be required to have his cattle tested for Bang's disease. He also has appeared before the Augusta board of supervisors, asking that it decree that the test be made.

It is estimated that among the 30,000 head of cattle in this county, between 1,500 and 2,000 have this disease, generally regarded as being responsible for undulant fever. Under Federal arrangements, cattle are tested free of charge and those found diseased are killed, the owner being paid a fair return for the animal by the Government.

Miss Stinnett Is Wed To Dickerson Griffith

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 29.—Thelma Rixey Stinnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Stinnett, of Remington, was married to Dickerson Griffith, of Culpeper, in Warrenton Wednesday. Mrs. Griffith is a graduate of William and Mary College and a Phi Beta Kappa. Mr. Griffith was graduated from the University of Illinois.

After a bridal trip the couple will be at home at Western View, Mr. Griffith's home near Culpeper. Mrs. Griffith is a sister of Harry Caskie Stinnett, Staunton newspaperman.

Liquor Election Off.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philippi, W. Va., July 29.—There will be no election in Barbour County on the liquor question in the near future at least. The county court denied an election when it discovered that the addresses of many of 2,800 persons who signed the petition presented to it were not given thereon.

St. John's May Admit Girls To Smash 239-Year Tradition

Coeducational Plan Again Under Consideration of College Board.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., July 29.—After 239 years of educating young men, traditional St. John's College may soon offer its courses as a coeducational institute.

The change has been discussed by school officials for many months and it was revealed today that the possibility again had been "talked over" at a recent meeting of the board of governors. The board, decided, however, to hold its decision until the matter could be thoroughly reviewed.

First suggestion of the tentative change was made last year by Enoch B. Garey, former president of the college, at a homecoming address before the alumni. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president, and former national director of prohibition, is understood to be in favor of admitting women to the classrooms.

Today, Dean Douglas L. Howard explained that the proposed expansion would put into use buildings throughout Annapolis owned by the college. At present, he said, no income is being realized from the buildings. Additional enrollment, Dean Howard added, would aid the school financially.

Founded in 1696 as King William's School—the first free school in the colonies—St. John's boasts the oldest college building standing in the country. It is the alma mater of Maryland's four signers of the Declaration of Independence, Charles Carroll, of Carrollton; Samuel Chase, William Paca and Thomas Stone.

The name of St. John's College was given to the school in 1784, soon after the last guns had ceased firing at Yorktown. Its charter, approved by the Maryland Legislature, stated that it "shall be maintained forever upon a most liberal plan, for the benefit of youth of every denomination." It was soon after this occasion that George Washington, who had spent many days in the Great Hall of McDowell Hall, in a letter "wished the infant seminary well."

Mysterious Cave-ins Threaten Highway

By the Associated Press.

Elliston, Va., July 29 (AP).—Highway engineers sought today to check mysterious caveins which have threatened Route 11, a main road, on the outskirts of this community.

Pits from 7 to 9 feet across and as much as 12 feet deep have appeared close to the highway during the last few days. So for the roadbed has not been damaged, but engineers are fearful lest one of the openings appear in the road itself.

Virginia With President, Says Rep. Woodrum

By the Associated Press.

Herndon, Va., July 29.—Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Roanoke, in an address here tonight interpreted the overwhelming Roosevelt majority in a Richmond newspaper poll as meaning "the people of Virginia, taken as a whole, are with the President."

The Roanoke Representative said: "It has occurred to me that the people I represent devoutly want to see the President's program succeed, that they want action and as long as there was sincerity of purpose and an honest effort being made they were willing to overlook some mistakes and failures."

The address was the second delivered by Woodrum to Young Democrats of northern Virginian in two weeks. In the first, at Leesburg, Woodrum struck back at criticism of himself and the Administration that arose in his own district. His speech tonight amplified the first with the assertion that "no thoughtful citizen would seriously countenance any deliberate attempt to destroy our Constitution."

He said there are many who believe that under the present economic system it will be necessary ultimately to give the Federal Government power to act in the abolition of child labor, fixing minimum wages and maximum hours of work, and in the "prevention of cutthroat trade practices."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

McNulty, Maryland state commander of the American Legion, who has been under fire of western Maryland Legion posts because of his acceptance of the post of State service office, was guest yesterday of Morris Frock Post, one of the posts which condemned the acceptance. McNulty attended the annual picnic of the post held along the Conococheague Creek. He said the charges came as the result of "legion politics."

Police to Quiz Girl, 19, About Drowned Baby

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 29.—Waynesboro police this afternoon found the body of an infant girl, and tomorrow morning in the Augusta County Jail here will question Helsey Carter, 19, of Sherando, this county, who is alleged to be the mother.

David Via, young Waynesboro man, told officials this afternoon he saw a woman enter South River at Waynesboro late Saturday night, carrying a bundle, and that when she reappeared she was empty-handed. He attached no significance to the incident, he said, until he learned today the Carter girl had been placed in jail here after reports that her 13-day-old child was missing. The body was found where Via said he saw the woman enter the river.

No charges have been placed against the young woman. Dr. Glenn C. Campbell said the baby died from drowning.

Infant Mortality Drops.

Baltimore, Md., July 29 (AP).—A drop from 69 to 64 per 1,000 in the Maryland infant mortality rate during the first six months of this year compared with last year was reported by Dr. R. H. Riley, State health officer. There was little change in the ratio of the birth and death rates for the two periods.

Ickes, Peery Settle Route Of ParkRoad

Secretary Is Reported Eager for Start on Mountain Link.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes' approval of the original mountain route for the road connecting the Shenandoah National Park with the Great Smoky Mountain Park in the section between Luray and the peaks of Otter was given yesterday to Gov. Peery.

Gov. Peery said Ickes chose the mountain route instead of the suggested alternate route into the valley in the Natural Bridge section.

The Governor said Ickes stated he was eager to get the work started on this section and link it with the section of the road already started in North Carolina.

The Virginia Governor, with State Comptroller E. R. Combs and State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, conferred at length with the Secretary and at conclusion of the conference Shirley met with the Interior Department solicitor and together they drafted the form of deed to be used in conveying approximaely 70 per cent of the right of way of the route already under option.

The remaining rights of way, the Governor said, will be the subject of a bill he will recommend to the State Legislature in January authorizing condemnation proceedings.

The road will be a continuation of the Skyline drive and ultimately will be a link in the drive connecting the two national parks—the Shenandoah in Virginia and the Great Smoky in North Carolina.

United Artists Will Inaugurate New Season's Releases With Six "Specials"

New Films Will Begin to Reach Screens Aug. 9

Jack London Story First; Pirandello Is Visitor; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

They no longer call it that, but August will usher in a "Greater Movie Season," in fact, this year, just as in the old days of the silent picture and unrefrigerated theaters it was accustomed to do in theory.

From time to time in this space, announcement has been made of forthcoming productions of the major studios that bid fair to make this late summer and early fall notable in the annals of the cinema as one of the most prolific periods in its history. Now comes United Artists, considerably harried of late by the defection of Twentieth Century as a producing unit, and the consequent necessity of reorganization and the bolstering of its release schedules, with the declaration that six of its new productions either are completed or in the final stages of advancement before the cameras and microphones.

These will be the company's first releases for the new season—as if motion-picture exhibition knew any "season," other than the usual 52 weeks comprising each year of our Lord.

The producers represented in this early distribution of films include Samuel Goldwyn, Charlie Chaplin, Reliance Pictures, Alexander Korda and Twentieth Century with those pictures to which Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck were committed before they made up their minds to affiliate with Fox.

London's Epic First.

The first of the new films to be given national release will be Jack London's "The Call of the Wild," Zanuck's production starring Clark Gable, with Loretta Young and Jack Oakie. It was this production unit that was snowbound in the high country to the north of Hollywood last winter and weeks overdue in getting back to "civilization." The picture is said to be all the better on that account, it being an epic of the Far North, as everyone, of course, perfectly well knows. This one will be turned loose a week from next Friday, August 9.

"The Call of the Wild" will be followed on September 6 by "The Dark Angel," the Samuel Goldwyn production in which Frederic March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall are jointly starred. It will be recalled by those whose memories go back to the silent era, at about the borderline of sound, that "The Dark Angel" was one of Ronald Coleman's most impressive vehicles.

"Red Salute," the Reliance film with Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Young, is scheduled for release on September 13.

"Barbary Coast," a subject that was held in abeyance a year ago, because of the mode and morality agitation, will come to the screen of the Nation's theaters on September 27. This also is a Goldwyn offering, with Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson and Joel McCrea, in the pivotal roles.

Mr. Korda Kicks In.

On October 4, Alexander Korda's production with Roland Young, "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," is to be nationally released.

"Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times," the star's first film in four years, will have its world premiere in New York on Friday, October 11, at a theater still to be selected.

The title finally decided upon for "Picture No. 5," as it was known in work, reflects an odd point of view on the part of Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin.

There is that about it—"Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times"—that implies a definite personal philosophy on the part of its author, producer and star. Chaplain, in his own view, evidently is to be construed as a symbol of the cinema's soul through the ages.

Such a title as he has chosen for his latest film could only be evolved from a purely introspective appraisal of the importance of Chaplin to art, in his own eyes, at least, as the shining exemplar, in various eras, of the triumph of the oppressed.

But that is aside from the point that this is a pretty likely looking batch of celluloid that United Artists has rigged up.

Adele Gusack, one of the prominent members of the Roadside Theater's acting forces, who made so favorable an impression in the leading feminine role of Winona Godfrey's manuscript play of "Grand Gesture," was hostess at a supper party last night in honor of the cast of "Trilby," opening at the Roadside tonight. Miss Gusack entertained in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel V. Gusack, 3730 Oliver street, Chevy Chase.

"Certainly Can Can-Can!"

Speaking of "Trilby," the cast of the Roadsiders' revival of Paul M. Potter's dramatization of the Du Maurier story will be headed by such local favorites as Denis Connell, Carey Lucas, Walter McIntosh, Ruth Perrott and Richard Stringfellow, under the direction of Harrold Weinberger. The production will run for two weeks and promises to be the barn theater's most popular offering to date, if advance reservation of seats may be construed as an accurate straw in the wind.

A particularly "naughty" feature of the Roadside production will be the execution of the famous Parisian "can-can" by Ada Bills, a former Folies Bergere and Moulin Rouge dancer.

The traditional gayety of the Latin Quarter is depicted in "Trilby" when Little Billee calls in his fellow artists and students to celebrate his engagement to Trilby. In addition to dancing the "can-can" and having directed the party scene in the current play, Miss Bills appeared for several seasons at the celebrated Parisian night club and theater. She also was with Mistinguette for a season and danced at the Casino de Paris when Maurice Chevalier was there.

Due to the signing of several new commercial air contracts, which will render it impossible for him to present himself unfailingly at the theater at stage show hours, Larry Elliott, presidential announcer of broadcasting station WJSV of the Columbia Broadcasting System, has been compelled to relinquish his place as one of the four masters of ceremonies in the forthcoming "Going Native Revue," scheduled for Loew's Fox Theater the week of August 9.

So there will be only three m. c.'s—just like the diminished Marx Brothers. These will be Arthur Reilly and Horace and Polly Hunnicutt.

The chorus for this third all-Washington production is in daily rehearsal under the direction of Marjorie Hartoin, ballet mistress of the Capitol Theater, New York, and principals are now studying lines and "business" under Gene Ford's direction. Reading rehearsals are being held virtually every day and night.

An Ablutionary Error.

From Mr. John W. Ward, Hotel Grafton, under date of July 26, 1935, comes a communication that so accurately estimates the merits and demerits of "The Scoundrel," the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur picture, starring Noel Coward, recently at the Palace, that it seems worthy of reproduction in full. I give you Mr. Ward:

Now that the "Scoundrel" has come and is going, one can properly pay his respects to the splendid casting of the piece, the consistent characterization of the players, the especially fine work of the leading woman and the entertaining dialogue which, modeled in part after Wilde, Shaw and Clyde Fitch, was a good imitation of the real thing.

But, why, under the protecting shelter of the cinema rule, should the inimitable Noel Coward have chosen to make his entrance in a putting-on-of-pants scene? The practice of showing the star in an undressing, or a just-out-of-the-bath, scene is growing among our leading producers; it is only fair to remark at this point that, so far, to my knowledge, our other English visitors—Colman, Warner, Brook, Howard—have not fallen for the trick, as have some of our native men stars. But personally, I thought Noel Coward was above that sort of claptrap.

"Delicate Perception."

He showed his delicate perception of the amenities by, at least facing the audience when he was tucking his shirt-tails into his trousers; perhaps in his next picture, he will not exercise such nice restraint!

It seems a pity that producers do not realize that some of our audience is made up of gentlefolk; they have not realized that the day of the moran, or servant-girl, stage has been passed in the motion-picture world of today, and that what would be offensive to the producer's own mother or sister, on the stage, is just as offensive when presented on the screen?

Signed) JOHN W. WARD.

While this department subscribes to practically everything Mr. Ward has said, it especially applauds his final paragraph. There were many who witnessed "The Scoundrel" who wondered what the Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur, and more specifically the attenuated Mr. Coward, himself, thought was added to the value of the picture by introducing its star in a shower bath, immediately followed by the least delicate and most undiverting items of a gentleman's matutinal toilet.

After all, Mr. Coward is no Jean Harlow!

With Katharine Cornell, Eva Le Gallienne and the most brilliant luminaries of the screen dedicating their talents to the part these latter months, and Shakespeare enjoying a renaissance of the most inspiriting sort on both stage and screen, it is interesting to note that yesterday was the seventy-sixth birthday anniversary of that distinguished actress, Mary Anderson, who was born in Sacramento, Calif., on July 28, 1859, and made her stage debut as Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet" in Macauley's Theater, Louisville, Ky., on November 27, 1875.

Her last professional stage appearance in America was made at Albaugh's Opera House, afterward known as Chase's and still later as Poli's, in this city, on March 7, 1889, when she appeared in "A Winter's Tale."

She then returned to England and married Antonio de Navarro in 1890, having definitely announced her retirement from the stage. She was absent from the theater for 27 years, returning not until 1916 to participate in a war charity.

She has since played intermittently, having appeared last in Robert Hichens' "The Garden of Allah," at the Drury Lane Theater, London, in 1920.

This revered artiste now makes her home at Court Farm, Broadway, Warwickshire, England. America congratulates her upon her birthday.

Pirandello Is Impressed.

The first Broadway play visited by Luigi Pirandello, famous Italian author and playwright, whose last name suggests a Spanish dance, on his arrival in New York last week was "The Old Maid," Zoe Akins' dramatization of Edith Wharton's novel of the same name. The play is now in the eighth month of its Empire Theater, New York, engagement, and will continue there until the start of its road tour in Philadelphia on September 30.

After witnessing the performance, Signor Pirandello requested an interview with Judith Anderson, who, with Helen Menken, stars in the Pulitzer Prize play. Visiting Miss Anderson backstage in her dressing room, Italy's most famous playwright and winner of the Nobel Prize, suggested that the actress appear in a revival of his play "As You Desire Me," in which she starred on Broadway four years ago, but which he did not witness at that time.

Star Is Enthusiastic.

Enthused with the idea, Miss Anderson has discussed it with Harry Moses, producer of "The Old Maid," and it is likely that a plan will be worked out whereby one or more special matinee performances of the Pirandello piece may be given at the Empire before "The Old Maid" embarks upon its road expedition.

This is largely contingent, so I am informed by that eminent publicist, William Fields, long associated with Rowland Stebbins, Inc., and "The Green Pastures," and now similarly affiliated with the Henry Moses enterprises, who made a flying visit to the Capital yesterday, upon the attitude of Lee Shubert, original producer of "As You Desire Me," just back from Europe, and whether or not he still has in the storehouse the original production of the play which might be exhumed for the purposes of the special matinees.

Pirandello, who is best known in this country for his "Six Characters in Search of an Author," a play moderately successful when presented in New York about a decade ago, is currently putting the finishing touches on his newest drama, a work upon which Mr. Moses will have first call when completed.

In charge of the advance publicity staff of "The Old Maid," when the Pulitzer Prize play launches its coast-to-coast tour late in September, will be Beverly Kelley, well known in Washington, who for three years was general press representative for "The Green Pastures." Mr. Kelley, whose home is in Delaware, Ohio, recently resigned as general press representative for the Hagenbeck-Wallace and Forepaugh-Sells Bros. circuses—or is it circi?—and will assume his new duties in August?

John-Law-Says-No Note.

It is a delightful thought that because there are children in "The Old Maid" Washington may not be included in the itinerary of this year's Pulitzer Prize winner because of the terms of the District's Child Labor Law, which prohibits the appearance of a child actor on a Washington stage, no matter how safeguarded, tutored, pampered and protected.

We are being "kidded" out of too many excellent plays on account of that law!

Blonde Crashes the Front Pages!

There have been less interesting blondes involved in newspaper front pages before, for this time it happens to be Bette Davis, and the occasion a lively comedy-drama of the Fourth Estate, "Front Page Woman." In this sprightly piece of film business Miss Davis has the advantage of playing opposite George Brent, rapidly developing into one of the cinema's most facile romantic comedians. The story was adapted from "Women Are Bum Newspapermen." It will be seen, come Friday, on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater.

Rules Drafted Governing Aid To Poor Pupils

Richmond Sends Notices on Relief Program to VERA Officials.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, July 29.—Students needing aid under the student-help program of the National Youth Administration today were given an opportunity to get all details of the plan from local VERA officials.

In a letter to area administrators and local senior workers of the VERA, William A. Smith, State WPA and VERA director, set forth the following facts:

Eligibility—The student must be able to do high-grade college work and must be financially unable to go to college without his assistance.

Institutions—All institutions of collegiate grade, public and private, are eligible to participate in the program provided they are nonprofit making in character.

Type of aid—Aid is provided in the form of part-time jobs, enabling students to earn on an average of $15 per month while attending school. No scholarship or loans are available from the NYA.

How to apply—Application should be made to the president of the institution, asking for assignment to a NYA job. If the institution cannot supply the job, the State youth director should be queried for names of other institutions which have not filled their quota.

Soil Erosion Project Planned for County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 29.—Harrison County may be included in the 91 "demonstration areas" planned by the conservation service of the United States Department of Agriculture, to teach farmers how to protect their lands and halt soil erosion.

A project has been submitted and plans are now under way to obtain agreements with land owners in the Gnatty Creek section of the county, so that soil conservation work may be started as soon as the State's allotment of Federal works relief funds for this type of activity is received. The Gnatty Creek watershed comprises an area of approximately 25,000 acres.

Rippy's 74 Gains Tie for Second in Public Parks Qualifying

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

THIS department wasn't going to mention the impending war between Italy and Ethiopia until the thing virtually forced itself upon this column. There seems now to be a general baseball theme in connection with the preparations for the engagement. Mussolini himself sounded the keynote when he said that the contest was being postponed until November on account of the summer rains which have made the tropical domains of Haile Selassie unfightable by civilized Italian troops.

POVICH.

It is probably the first war that was ever postponed on account of wet grounds. Anyway, taking the cue from Mussolini, Selassie has made no move toward covering his desert country with a tarpaulin that would permit the fighting to start immediately upon the cessation of the showers. It may come under the head of spite, but it all reads very much as if Ethiopia doesn't want to play the war in the first place. But with Italy obviously stalling for time, Selassie's tactics are excusable.

Anyway, Mussolini seems to be going too far in his authority. As manager of the home club, it was Selassie's privilege, not Italy's, to decide when the war should be played. But Mussolini apparently is determined to make sport of all league rules, including the League of Nations.

And if they are not careful, both Mussolini and Selassie will both alienate the support of the press. The thing has gone so far already that the war may not be worth covering. You can imagine the reaction of the correspondents if they finally succeed in penetrating deep into Ethiopia with expense accounts running riot, only to arrive at the scene and learn that the Battle of Addis Ababa has been played on a former date as part of a week-end double-header.

I SEE by the papers that the United States Olympic Committee has dispatched Gen. William Sherrill, a committee member, from Paris to Berlin to investigate reports that there are discriminations against Jewish and Catholic athletes as Germany prepares to stage the 1936 Olympiad. Now isn't that fine?

It may look very good in print—this business of sending a special United States investigator to Berlin. It would seem that the United States Olympic people are in earnest about getting at the bottom of the reports of Nazi atrocities against Catholics and Jews. But, unmasked, the move of the United States committee is a joke, a hollow gesture and an absurd attempt to show good faith.

Gen. William Sherrill is the self-same gentleman who came back from Germany last year to address the national convention of the Amateur Athletic Union in Washington and report that he found no discrimination against Jewish athletes. In the face of concrete cases of discrimination presented by A. A. U. delegates, Sherrill persisted that he found no trace of persecutions in Germany.

Sherrill had to save his face. It was after his return to the United States when he had stated that he perceived no discrimination against Jewish athletes, that A. A. U. delegates presented concrete cases of persecutions by the Nazis. It was not pleasant for Sherrill to realize that he had been "taken in" by Nazis who escorted him on a tour of athletic camps and gave him the impression that Jew and Gentile were being treated alike.

WHAT do they expect Sherrill to do now, admit that he had been kidded all along by the Nazi athletic chiefs? To put it bluntly, the whole thing looks like a whitewash. If the Olympic people here were in earnest, why in the world didn't they send an investigator who hadn't already apparently muffed one try at the job? No, they simply gave it back to Sherrill.

What does Sherrill expect to learn on his second tour of Germany that he didn't learn on his first? Doesn't he know and don't the Olympic people here know that the good general will observe in Germany exactly what the Nazis think is good for him to observe? And, pursuing the same thought, the Nazis will take care that anything that Gen. Sherrill should not observe in Germany, anything that would be unhealthy to the Nazis' claims of no discriminations, why, Gen. Sherrill certainly will not be permitted to observe.

The Olympic games are supposed to build up good will among nations. Germany on the one hand wants to stage the games, and on the other hand is seemingly intent upon antagonizing every freedom-loving nation. Every Catholic and Jew inside and outside of Germany can see that with half an eye. The United States Olympic people can't, even with a special observer.

Leader Threatens To Quit; Hits Nazis

Olympic Track Official Raps 'Persecutions.'

By the United Press.

Boston, July 29.—Miss Pauline Bromberg, of Boston, will resign as committeewoman for the women's track and field division of the 1936 American Olympic team if the Nazis continue their "minority persecutions" in Germany, she said today.

"I could not go into a country where I should be received with merely a mask of welcome," she said. "I can't see how any religious groups can go into such a country and participate in games in which tolerance and good-will are supposed to be prime principles."

Miss Bromberg, whose ancestors were German Jews, is girls' physical director at East Boston High School and secretary of the New England A. A. U. Her father served with the late Calvin Coolidge in the Massachusetts Legislature.

Six in Group Even With D. C. Ace

Malloy Shoots 80 and Burrows and Burton Register 84's.

By Dave Herman,

A Staff Correspondent.

COFFIN Municipal Course, Indianapolis, July 29.—A 74, four over par, enabled Claude Rippy, 22-year-old Washington, D. C., municipal golf champion, to trail the pace setter, Lloyd Nordstrom, of Davenport, Iowa, by three strokes and tie with six others for second place in the first 18-hole round of the National Public Links championship here today.

The tall, lanky District star, displaying some nervy putting and brilliant recovery shots on the stretch, negotiated the first nine in 38 and came home in 36 to find himself in a comfortable position at the half-way mark of the 36-hole qualifying test.

Rippy's round, overshadowed only by the sensational performance of the 31-year-old bread-slicing-machine salesman from Iowa, was an exhibition of real courage, and stamped the Washington golfer as a formidable challenger for the crown now being worn by Dave Mitchell, the 27-year-old hometown boy, who failed to make good in his 1935 debut today.

Rippy Has Company.

Deadlocked with Rippy for temporary runner-up honors were Louis Cyr, a young railroad man from Portland, Oreg.; Tab Boyer, also from Portland; Delbert Walker, of Long Beach, Calif.; Pete Doll, of Louisville, Ky.; Mike Balego, of St. Paul, and Fred Gordon, of Santa Monica, Calif. Balego and Gordon made beautiful comebacks after shooting the outgoing nine in 39, three over par. They banged out 35s coming in with the twilight and holing out just as darkness set in.

Rippy was the only member of the District Harding Cup Team able to crack 80. The other three did not fare so well. George Malloy, the red-haired flash, rallied on the back nine to finish with 42-38—80.

Bradley (Ted) Burrows, the 210-pound poultry salesman, who twice has traveled to the National quarter-finals, and the bespectacled Bobby Burton, scored 84s.

Scoring Is Very High.

Today's scoring was unusually high and three District golfers, not fortunate enough to go below the 80 mark, considered themselves lucky to score as they did. Gritting their teeth under the shade of an ancient pine tree near the eighteenth green late this evening, the Washington Harding Cuppers vowed to "step on the proverbial gas," come tomorrow, and shoot the legs out from under old man par.

That this Coffin course is rough and tough is evidenced by the fact that no one broke par in practice rounds, and no one did it today when the big push was on. Nordstrom, a burly Swede, who is unheralded and unsung as far as National Public Links championships are concerned, was a veritable scoring machine, his score might easily have been 68 or 69 were it not for the fact that the slicing machine salesman sliced one into the treacherous lagoon on the treacherous 445-yard sixteenth hole and wound up with a seven, three over par. He had just birdied the fifteenth hole—a deuce—and needed par in for the next three holes for a 68.

The big Swede, rapping out birdies on five holes, shot the first nine in 35. He had two deuces and four 3s on his card.

Stars Fare Poorly.

This was no day for the champion, the ex-champions and the prospective champions. Defending Title Holder Mitchell, who is good looking enough to land a job in Hollywood, disappointed the day's largest gallery by shooting a 77, seven over par. Mitchell took a seven on the tenth and a six on the fourteenth, a hooking being the root of the evil.

7-Foot Putt Beats Goodman by Stroke

Eaton Trembles But Wins Denver Golf Title.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, July 29.—His hands trembling so he scarcely could hold the club, lean Zell Eaton, of Oklahoma City, sent a 7-foot putt scooting into the cup on the eighteenth green at Cherry Hills today for a one-stroke victory over Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, and the Denver Invitation golf championship.

They were tied with 291 shots at the close of the regulation 72-hole stretch yesterday and met for an 18-hole play-off to decide which should get the title Brown Cannon, of Denver, won last year. Eaton shot 71 today, one under par, and Goodman had 72.

It was a tight squeeze for the Oklahoman, former Western amateur champion. As the afternoon waned he watched his early lead, built on brilliant golf in the outgoing nine, slowly crumble away.

Bernard Bows To Temes in Ring Upset

Florida Feather Captures 10-Round Decision at Stadium.

JOE TEMES, bull-dogged Florida Greek featherweight, scored one of the most sensational upsets of the season at Griffith Stadium last night by pummeling out a unanimous ten-round decision over Roger Bernard, of Flint, Mich.

Outweighed 4 pounds and conceding experience and punching power to the Michigander, Temes utilized superior speed to enable him to dance about Bernard to pop out his points. While Temes scored almost at will at long range, Bernard punched away with reckless abandon and great effect in close.

Temes was immediately offered a chance to meet Freddie Miller, featherweight champion, in a bout in Cincinnati August 14. The match will be accepted and the little Greek, who battled his way from the preliminary ranks to top spots, thus will become the first fighter to meet Miller on his return from a protracted tour of Europe.

One Patsy Severo, a New York lightweight, was awarded the official decision over venerable Andy Martin, a Boston featherweight, in a not too interesting eight-round semi final. Officially outweighed five pounds by the 131¼-pound Severo, Martin outsmarted the clinging vine, known as Severo for the entire distance, but Judge Frank Schuyler and Referee Charley Reynolds balloted for the New Yorker, while Judge Henri di Sibour voted Martin the winner, thereby casting his futile lot with The Post tally.

Eddie Burl, rugged old Jacksonville veteran, out-pummelled young and willing Dave Barry, a St. Louis featherweight, in a six-round bar room brawl, laughlingly called a preliminary bout. They wrestled and tugged and punched and growled throughout to the great delight of the customers. Burl landed a few more punches and was about 10 butts behind at the finish, which entitled him to the unanimous decision he received.

Ray Ingram, local lightweight, slugged his way to a draw with the highly-touted Patsy La Roccas, of New York, in a pleasing six-rounder. Fighting in an exaggerated crouch, La Roccas would have proven a puzzling problem for any punch pusher, but Ingram solved the problem well enough to earn the vote of Referee Kid Sullivan and The Post scoresheet. Both judges balloted the contest a draw, which makes it a draw on the records.

By Shirley Povich.

THEIR first-division hopes revived by the Yankee Stadium splurge which netted them three victories in four games with New York, the Nats today begin a new nine-game home stand that calls for all three Eastern clubs to invade Griffith Stadium.

First to test the newly inspired Nats will be the fourth-place Red Sox, who open a three-game series today. Joe Cronin's Boston club is 8½ games ahead of Washington, but Manager Bucky Harris does not deem that a margin too great to overcome.

"Detroit picked up 17 games on us during the first half of the season," said Harris. "That shows what can be done. We are beginning to get a little better pitching and there is no complaint against the team's hitting.

Will Experiment a Bit.

"But from now on I'm going to experiment a bit. My young pitchers are going to get thorough trials. That means that Hayes, McLean and Coppola will get a chance to take a regular turn. I'm going to pitch Hayes against Boston in the series opener, and both McLean and Coppola are likely to face the Red Sox before the series is over.

"I know what the veteran pitchers can do and I know that we're doomed unless one or two of the rookie pitchers come through for us. Coppola still looks like the best of the lot, and if Hayes can curb his wildness, he can stay in the big leagues."

The operation, which involved the extraction of two molars caused Clark Griffith to postpone the occasion until next month—August 1 to be exact, which is Thursday.

Bill decided to have the ivories removed yesterday morning, weathered the undertaking pasably well but began feeling the effects of it shortly before noon. The vacancies caused by the departure of the teeth were more than filled by a fever which caused Werber to take to bed for the rest of the day.

A doctor was called to the Werber home in Silver Spring and left with the order that the former owner of the teeth remain inactive not only for the rest of the day but today as well, Bill Werber Day to the contrary notwithstanding.

British Defeat U. S. In Doubles, Keep Cup

JOHN VAN RYN.

WILMER ALLISON.

Hughes and Tuckey Upset Erratic Allison and Van Ryn in Five Sets to Clinch Series in Third Match.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 29.—America's Davis Cup tennis team went down to a crushing defeat today as England's new doubles combination of George Patrick Hughes and Raymond Tuckey vanquished the veteran pair of Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn in a stirring five-set match. The scores were 6—2, 1—6, 6—8, 6—3, 6—3.

With two singles triumphs scored Saturday the victory enabled Great Britain to clinch the coveted big trophy for the third straight year no matter what happens in the concluding singles matches tomorrow between Fred J. Perry and Allison, and H. W. (Bunny) Austin and red-headed Don Budge.

Although the challengers had little hope of re-capturing the cup after their initial setbacks, they confidently had expected to win the doubles and postpone the verdict until tomorrow.

Crowd Is Uproarious.

The Americans were a dejected crew after Allison had served a double fault to end the match. The veteran Texan's costly error sent a strongly pro-British crowd yelling deliriously. Cushions and hats were thrown about wildly, in a manner characteristic of the end of any American baseball world series.

It was a sour note upon which came the end of the campaign that at times had been so full of promise. It was the first defeat of an American doubles team in the challenge round since Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, of France, conquered the same pair in 1930. All who witnessed the collapse of the once peerless combination after it had led two sets to one agreed Uncle Sam will have to look around for another and a younger doubles team before next summer.

The cohesion and subtlety Allison and Van Ryn once had was almost completely missing as Tuckey, a former Cambridge Blue and a newcomer to cup competition, and the veteran, hard-bitten Hughes volleyed and served their way to victory. Tuckey, a young artillery officer in His Majesty's forces, justified his rapid elevation to an international status.

Tuckey Is U. S. Target.

Expecting that Tuckey's inexperience would cause him to crack under pressure, the Americans immediately made him the target for their shots. The result was profitless because Tuckey proved he could take it. He also displayed easily the strongest and steadiest service and frequently chalked up love games.

Pirates Check Cards With Four Hits

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, July 29. — Red Lucas, stocky right-hander, added to the discomfiture of the sliding St. Louis Cardinals today by holding the world champions to four hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat them, 3 to 2, for the third victory of the four-game series.

Pepper Martin slapped Lucas for a home run in the fourth and a two-base error by Paul Waner on Lefty Bill Hallahan's fly in the sixth, followed by Burgess Whitehead's single, scored the Cards' second run, evening the count for the time being.

Score in First.

The Pirates went to work early on Hallahan, scoring two runs in the first on singles by Lloyd Waner, Paul Waner and Arkie Vaughan, coupled with Young's long fly. Padden scored the winning run in the seventh after forcing Gus Suhr, who opened the inning with a single. Lloyd Waner's single drove Padden home after Jensen advanced the catcher with a single.

The Cards made a desperate effort to catch up with Lucas in the ninth, getting the tying and winning markers on base with two out. Jim Collins got on on Young's fumble and Bill Delancey singled him to third, but Virgil Davis, batting for Terry Moore, fouled out to Suhr for the final out.

White Sox Take Third From St. Louis

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 29.—Les Tietje, White Sox moundsman, outpitched three St. Louis Browns hurlers as the third-place "Windy City" club walloped the St. Louisians for a 7-to-2 triumph here today, closing a four-game series. It was Chicago's third victory in the set.

Manager Rogers Hornsby sent Coffman, Cain and Thomas to the box to struggle for a series-splitting conquest, but Tietje held the cellar-dwelling Browns to three hits. One was a circuit clout by West, St. Louis centerfielder, in the seventh.

The Browns made a triple play in the ninth inning. With two men on base, Tietje tried for a squeeze play. He fouled to Hemsley, however, whose throw to Carey, who was covering first, doubled Sewell off the bag. Carey's throw to Clift tripled Hopkins off third.

Joe Louis Takes Rest To Avoid Going Stale

Chicago, July 29 (U.P.).—Joe Louis was so near peak condition for his fight with King Levinsky August 7 that he took a rest today to keep from going stale.

Yankee Sails to Win 40-Mile British Race

Yankee led throughout the 40-mile race and finished in 3 hours 12 minutes 16 seconds. Astra finished second, 6 minutes 41 seconds behind the Boston sloop.

Indians Down Tigers, 6-5, End Jinx

Detroit Lead Sliced by Half Game; Rally in 9th Is Nipped.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, July 29.—The Cleveland Indians did a right-about face today, walloping Alvin Crowder for half a dozen runs in the sixth inning to beat the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 5, for the first time in their last 12 tries. The defeat cut the Tigers' league-leading margin to 2½ games over the idle Yankees.

Crowder had allowed the Indians only three hits in five innings and the Tigers were leading, 3 to 0, when the balloon suddenly went up in the sixth. Averill walked, Campbell singled and Trosky, Knickerbocker and Phillips doubled. Hudlin singled, and with six runs in, the rally ended only when Vosmik was thrown out at the plate trying to stretch a triple into a home run.

Elden Auker replaced Crowder starting the seventh, but the damage was done, though the Tigers made a desperate effort to tie things up in the ninth and did succeed in routing Willis Hudlin. Hudlin, who allowed 14 hits, filled the bases with one out in the ninth as Jo Jo White and Mickey Cochrane singled and Hank Greenberg was purposely passed.

Fans Goose Goslin.

Thornton Lee relieved him, however, fanned Goose Goslin on three pitched balls and forced Bill Rogell to pop up for the final out.

Wanna Buy a Duck? Or Maybe Bet on One? Well, How's This?

By the United Press.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 29.—Wings flapping, nevks outstretched and tail tufts fluttering in the breeze, the only copyrighted ducks in the United States flashed through a series of snappy time trials tonight.

With Charley Reed, young duck rancher, holding the watch, Goo-Goo Hatcha, of Glendale, a long-striding webfoot, staggered home in the fastest 3-yard heat to win by a bill in 10 seconds flat.

Goo-Goo Hatcha, of Glendale, however, is not the fastest duck in the Reed coops. Filzio, who Reed asserts is the fastest racing duck in the world, has beat Goo-Goo almost every time out when he has finished. Filzio, Reed explained, is a temperamental duck and insists on falling on his chest at the post.

"Ducks are tricky," Reed said. "Sometimes I can get Filzio offff to a good start by stroking his nose. Other times I have to give him a kick in the hindquarters to start him off."

The finishing line is in a trough of barley, and the first duck home scoops up the most.

"Ducks," said Reed, "know their barley. If they don't they soon learn. I have perhaps half a dozen 10-second ducks over a 30-yard course."

Reed's biggest problem is John's birthday. This duck, named after a race horse, runs in circles, and sometimes stops to make friends with fans along the rail—particularly if they stretch out a hand.

Fillgo, a big, black duck with red wattles, is the best kind of racing duck because he doesn't quack—merely hisses, giving to the race an effect of a leaking tire.

"He's a good money duck," Reed said. "Bettors hear him hissing and think he's wind broke and won't bet on him. Wise money at long odds always has a good chance on Fillgo."

Reed has an exclusive copyright on duck racing, taken out before he built his track. His only obstacle was a protest filed by the Humane Society because he didn't have a pool for the ducks to swim in.

"Hell's bells!" Reed said. "The Humane Society didn't even know a land duck when they see one. These here ducks can't swim."

Whitney's Red Rain, 6-1, Wins Feature as Saratoga Opens

Colt Comes From Rear To Score

Delphinum Is Second by 2 Lengths; 10,000 Watch Running.

By the Associated Press.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 29.—Red Rain, a chestnut son of Pennant, making his fist public appearance in the famous blue and brown silks of C. V. Whitney, performed in highly promising fashion when he pilfered a purse of $3,400 in the sixty-first Flash Stakes before an inaugural crowd of close to 10,000 here today.

The Whitney colt, which had shown a lot of speed in working trials, came from far out of it in the field of nine juveniles to triumph by two lengths under Alfred Robertson. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's National Stallion Stakes winner, Delphinium, the only stakes winner of the year for that stable, headed Mrs. Payne Whitney's Galsac for the place. A. G. Vanderbilt's Postage Due was another head away in fourth place. The latter, coupled with Speed, ruled favorite at 3 to 2. Red Rain paid 6 to 1.

Rain Threatens.

Heavy rain last night and early today did not slow up the racing strip as much as expected. It was good by first race post time. However, the threat of more rain continued during the afternoon and cut down not only the size of the fields, but the attendance as well.

The winner's time for the 5½ furlongs was 1:07 flat.

Owner Whitney withdrew both Triumphant and Tatterdemalion and relied upon his newcomer to gain the purse and prestige of this historic stake. Red Rain came through in a manner to presage that he will be a stout factor for the 1935 2-year-old title.

So ended the first big feature of the Spa turf season. This ordinarily quiet and quaint little community, which slumbers peacefully in the shadows of the Adirondacks, once again became a carnival town as King Horse and his big caravan moved in for an annual one-month lease.

Bookmakers, who took gobs of the golden fleece from the players at the Empire City closing Saturday, stuffed their pockets again today. The first four choices ran for their benefit.

Only One Triumphs.

Mrs. Deering Howe's Only One, after knocking at the door on many occasions in topnotch competition, finally found the right spot in the ninth running of the American Legion Handicap, 7-furlong secondary feature. The colt, split favorite with the dull-running Singing Wood at 13 to 5, made his own pace under Bobby Merritt and had no trouble leading William Woodward's Vicar across the line by two lengths in 1:25 flat. Vicar's closing rally was just strong enough to head A. J. Vanderbilt's Identity out of second money.

In addition to winning $3,250 in prize money, Mrs. Howe was presented with a handsome piece of plate by Attorney General John J. Bennett, on behalf of the Saratoga County Post of the American Legion.

BAHAMAS worked his way up gradually, closed with a rush through the stretch and was going away at the end. GENTEEL LADY went up on the inside, was blocked nearing the far turn, came stoutly in the drive, but was unable to withstand the bid of the winner. OUR MAE improved her position on the outside in the last three furlongs and closed gamely, under pressure. CHARACTER, well placed from the start, assumed a slight lead in the stretch, only to falter in the last furlong. IMA COUNT, hard ridden and much used in racing with STAINFORTH, faltered in the last three-sixteenths. PARADUN was outrun. STAINFORTH stopped badly when the real test came.

REGARDLESS, under steadying restraint for the first six furlongs, moved up gamely when called upon, closed with good courage in the stretch and was up in the final stride. PRINCE ABBOT, under steadying restraint until leaving the back stretch, was fortunate in obtaining clear sailing on the inside, went to the lead entering the stretch, and just failed to hold on long enough. COHORT MISS came willingly in the last quarter-mile after being permitted to drop back of the pace. CANDIMATE, much used in racing with LEGENDER, stopped in the last three-sixteenths. HENRY D. COOKE PLAYGROUND yesterday won the Western Conference championship of the track and field meets conducted by the Department of Playgrounds. The meet, directed by Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds, was held at the Western Stadium.

Dick Dunaj Competes.

Another Washington and Lee star, Dick Dunaj, who holds the District of Columbia indoor 2-mile, Virginia cross-country, 2-mile and 3-mile records, also was on hand in the unlimited and unrestricted class events for Cooke yesterday. He won the 1-mile run in his class in slow time because he never was pressed.

At the conclusion of the meet the points stood: Cooke, 61; Georgetown, 40; Eaton, 18; Fillmore, 12½; Chevy Chase, 12; Hardy, 9; Mitchell Park, 8; Bancroft and Lafayette, 5 each; Stoddert, 4½; Corcoran, 4; Key, 3; Weightman, 3; Gallinger, 2, and Montrose, 1.

Bill Chipman, 19-year-old Georgetown freshman, gave an exhibition jump of 6 feet 1 inch in the running high jump.

Alexandria Legion Defends Schwartz

Meet at Richmond Today May Settle Case.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., July 29.—Stoutly defending the eligibility of Robert Schwartz, a member of the Alexandria Legion junior baseball team, Post Athletic Director John Hamilton and Coach Bill Langford today announced that they will fight to the finish the attempt to oust Alexandria from the State tournament.

The local team eliminated Pulaski and Richmond Saturday before Legion officials conducting the tournament suddenly declared Schwartz ineligible because of his age, and forfeited Alexandria's right to continue in the series. Both Hamilton and Langford emphatically declared that the boy's birth certificate clearly proves his eligibility.

A statement on the matter is forthcoming from Herman Jones, from the Legion's State headquarters, and a meeting of interested parties will be held tomorrow in Richmond, when final judgment will be passed on the case. This is Schwartz's last year with the legion.

New Orleans Goal of D. C. Net Aces

Welsh, McElvenny Pass Up National Doubles for Parks Tourney.

By John R. Vosburgh.

BARNEY WELSH and Ralph McElvenney, Middle Atlantic doubles champions, are giving Huey Long's New Orleans the choice over New England's Brookline, Mass., as a place to visit and in which to play tennis next month.

The national doubles championships are being held at Brookline, the National Public Parks championships in the Kingfish Town, but the boys much prefer seeing New Orleans to New England. Both tournaments start August 19.

"See America first" is the byword of rollicking Ralph, who says he's been to Brookline any number of times but has yet to see New Orleans.

"I wanted to go the Public Parks mainly on account of the trip," he says. "You get around more—have a better time than at the nationals. New Orleans is quite a town, too, I understand."

Fun and Exercise.

"I've played my serious tennis," continues the bespectacled 29-year-old lawyer, who has been married one year and had the first addition to his family a few weeks ago. "I'm a business man now, got a family and have to make a living. I'm playing tennis mostly for the fun of it and the exercise."

These were strange words coming from the hardest-fighting player in these parts, who battles for every point as if it meant the Davis Cup and who talks to himself continually while playing in order to make himself realize the importance of getting a particular point.

Ralph finally admitted he had other than geographical reasons for wanting to go to New Orleans. He and Barney reached the final last year, where they lost in five sets. He thinks they will make it go the other way this year.

Lot More Tennis.

Anyway, he says, they might not get past the first or second round in the Nationals. The Parks tournament will provide a lot more tesnis which, it follows, will mean a lot more exercise for Mr. McElvenny.

Welsh, of course, prefers New Orleans because he wants to defend his National Parks singles crown. He and McElvenny qualified for the Nationals at Brookline by winning the Middle Atlantic title and for the National Public Parks by winning the local parks championship.

"We get our expenses paid on either trip," says McElvenny, "but, after all, New Orleans is a lot farther than Brookline and they say travel is an education in itself."

old Pittsburgh secretary, blew up to the extent of an 80, the same score posted by Charlie Fererra, the swarthy San Francisco iron worker, champion in 1931 and 1933, who putted in what he said was his worst form.

The day's casualties also included two men who were figured to go a long ways in the championship. One was Al Anderegeen, the Chicago lad who bounced Johnny Fischer, of Walker Cup fame, out of the National Amateur at Brookline last year, and Johnny Banks, Notre Dame captain. Both are members of the Chicago Municipal team, Anderegeen scored an 83, and Banks an 87. The latter virtually kicked himself out of the picture.

Campbell Shoots 75.

Medalist last season, Albert (Scotty) Campbell, the red-faced Seattle star, twice winner of the Canadian amateur championship, finished with a 76, and Arthur Armstrong, 19-year-old Hawaiian star 1934 tournament finalist, was around in 75.

A group of unknowns is crowding the picture. There are 8 tied at 75, 9 at 76, 9 at 77, 14 at 78 and 13 at 79.

More than 190 golfers started out with high hopes today, and nightfall found only 62 who were good enough to break 80. If such scoring prevails in the final 18 holes tomorrow—and observers believe the scoring will be higher—indications are that 161 will play off.

Washington's Claude Rippy had eight fives on his card and only one birdie to show. His lone birdie came on the third, a 138-yarder, where he laid a mashie niblick 2 feet from the pin and got a deuce. What hurt Rippy on the first nine was three 3-putt greens. He was guilty of such putting on the first, second and ninth holes, taking fives on each. On the fifth, a short hole, he missed his birdie by inches, and on the sixth he missed another birdie by inches from 8 feet.

It was interesting to note that Rippy got off to bad starts on each nine. On the first nine he shot 5-5, and then played the next seven holes in par. On the back side he fired 5-5-5, 2 over, and shot the next six in even par.

Rippy Finds Woods.

By failing to steer clear of the woods on the eleventh and twelfth, Rippy took 5s, 1 over, on each hole. Short in 3 on the fourteenth, he knocked a nifty 5-footer to preserve his par, played two magnificent shots to the stiff sixteenth hole for his par 4, blasted out of a trap on 207-yard eighteenth and sank a 6-footer for his par 3.

Malloy had his troubles from start to finish, managing to par but six holes. He fell heir to a birdie deuce on the fifth. The red-haired didn't wake up until after he passed the sixth. At the seventh, he was 6 over par, and proceeded to play the remaining 12 holes in 4 over par. He went out in 42 and came back in 38.

Burrows was out in 44 and home in 40. Burton had 43-41. Burrows was bothered with an old ailment—bad putting. The lanky boy admitted he couldn't sink a single putt, while Burton played poorly with his woods and iron.

Cards of District golfers follow:

Park Lane Plays McLean.

The Park Lane A. C., fifth-place team in the Old Dominion League, is aiming to upset the McLean league-leading A. C. Sunday afternoon when the two teams meet on Park Lane Field. Doc Payne, star southpaw, will pitch for Park Lane, despite his 1-0 defeat Sunday after fanning 17 Clarendon A. C. batters and allowing but two hits.

Castleman's Return Bolsters Pennant Hopes of Giant Fans

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Writer.

NEW YORK, July 29.—"Slick" Castleman is back. And with his return to the mound, New York fans again are bubbling over with confidence that the Giants will capture the National League pennant.

Polo Grounds rooters laugh down recent menacing gestures by the Cubs and Cardinals, now that the rookie fireball thrower has recovered from a hand injury . . . Now that the Giants have another "big four" of rotating pitchers.

Clydell Castleman, as he was baptized 21 years ago, may be termed the "pennant man" of the National League. His performances during the remainder of the season will mean more to the Giants probably than the work of any other individual to any other club in the circuit.

Blessed this season with the best batting in Ford Frick's division, the Giants have an excellent chance of driving through to the flag if their pitching holds up. Their recent slump was due largely to mound weakness. This slump occurred during Castleman's absence. When he worked on July 6, just before fracturing a bone in his right pitching mitt while trying a bare-handed catch in batting practice, the Giants enjoyed an 8½-game lead. But when he returned to the hill yesterday to blank the Dodgers, the Giants' lead had dwindled to one lone game. In his absence, the Terrymen lost 9 out of 20 games. Meanwhile, the Cards and Cubs were playing championship ball.

At the start of the current season, Manager Terry did not figure on Castleman as a regular starter. The Giants' big four were Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, Roy Parmelee and Freddie Fitzsimmons. But in the first couple of weeks, Fitzsimmons, the knuckle ball specialist, developed elbow trouble. So the rookie from Donelson, Tenn., was given a chance. He came through magnificently and now has nine victories against two defeats for the best pitching percentage in the circuit.

The success of this handsome, dark-haired husky will be doubly important from now on because Fitzsimmons' arm trouble became so serious that an elbow operation was necessary. Fat Freddie was out of the line-up during the recent slump and will not return to the game for nearly another month. He won four and lost four before the operation.

British Defeat U. S. Again, Win Cup

set contributed to the American's downfall, but there were none who would say the Briton's triumph wasn't deserved. Both were more consistent with their ground strokes than the American and equally deadly at the net.

The way the powerful and handsome Tuckey punished the ball at the net was an outstanding feature, although Hughes' great serving in the deciding set was what killed off the Americans.

After the match the American dressing room for a time represented a morgue. Allison and Van Ryn tried to break the mournful atmosphere by "riding" each other jokingly. Non-playing Capt. Joseph Wear was the most downcast. Choked with emotion he sputtered, "we played our best men and did our best, but England had the better team."

Harry Hillman, Dartmouth College track coach and trainer of the American players, defended his end of America's eighth unsuccessful campaign since losing the cup to France in 1927.

"They certainly kept rigid training—every man on the American team observed the rules conscientiously and got plenty of sleep," Hillman said.

Miss Ryan Objects.

As a matter of fact there were no official "kicks" made and only one of the unofficial variety was recorded. Elizabeth Ryan, the Californian and now a tennis pro, complained bitterly against the foot-fault called on Van Ryn in the eighth game of the fourth set.

The Britons were leading 4-3 and the game score was 40-30 against Van Ryn. He slammed a fine ace past Tuckey for what would have deuced the game, had not a fault been called. Van Ryn pulled up short after the decision was announced and glared angrily at the official for a full minute. The judge said he called it because Van Ryn "jumped" and had both feet off the ground. The Britons seized the next chance for a winning point and led 5-3.

"It's unfair to go along not calling foot faults until an important game or point," Miss Ryan complained. "It unnerved Van Ryn."

Van Ryn might have had a siege of nerves after that, but long before he had sporadic attacks of the jitters that were responsible no little for the Americans' quick loss of the first set. He stroked the ball raggedly and seldom had enough height on his shots to clear the net.

For the next two sets Van Ryn and Allison flashed the form that carried them to their first challenge round doubles victory in 1929. They slipped momentarily in the third set as the Britons broke through Allison's delivery in the second game to run up a lead of 3-0.

The Americans then dug their toes deep into Wimbledon's plush-like turf and won three of the next five games to pull to 3-5. Fighting courageously, they took the ninth game against Hughes' service and then Allison held his delivery to square the match. The next four games followed service, but they were of the dog-fight variety with almost every point producing brilliant tennis.

Hughes' delivery was again the victim of the Americans' assault in the thirteenth game and then Allison and Van Ryn went out behind the former's service, but not until the American cheering contingent experienced palpitations. Allison led, 40—40, and then served a double fault, falling flat on his back. He double-faulted again to give his rivals the advantage, but saved the game with a great placement. After Van Ryn gave him set point with a kill at the net, Allison sent across a scorcher, which Tuckey barely touched.

That effort took a heavy toll of Allison's physical reserve. Neither he nor Van Ryn could get organized and many times they tried to play the ball together. Their loss for crucial points usually went many feet out of bounds, as did their drives from back court.

Allison showed that he's no longer physically capable of playing both singles and doubles, even with a day's rest in between.

Exhilarated over the doubles victory, both Perry and Austin engaged in long and strenuous practice sessions on outside courts before admiring audiences. Evidently they're determined to give their stricken adversaries a final complete shellacking.

"Out Fishin'"

By Jack Hawley.

IN spite of exceptionally strong winds from the Northeast last Saturday and Sunday, with some moderation late Sunday evening, good catches nevertheless were made at most of the places along the bay. Capt. J. C. Lore, operating a large fleet of high-class fishing boats at Solomons Island, reports a slight drop in the fishing last Saturday, but the prevailing ill winds did not prevent the croakers from recovering their lost appetites and their striking began again in the style so noticeable a few weeks ago. However, this did not occur until about 5 o'clock Sunday evening.

Few trout were caught, but with favorable winds this week, the fishing in this vicinity should bring around the big ones. It is interesting to learn that boatmen are furnishing this writer with excellent co-operation and suggestions for better fishing and all-round harmony and service for the future betterment of this glorious sport. We hope as time and "Out Fishin'" progress they will be rewarded with a decided increase in the anglers' desires to give more time to fishing during the first part of the week, avoiding in part of the demand created by others who are unable to get away early and must of necessity do their fishing over the week-end.

Capt. W. W. Woodward seemed to be in an exceptionally good humor late Sunday evening, undoubtedly the results of a satisfactory day's service to his patrons who had come to shore from the fishing grounds with enough fish for all. The 20 boats leaving the wharf at Kenwood Beach for the Gooses returned with an average of 100 croakers per boat. Very few trout were caught, but Mike Martin, of the 1300 block Irving street northwest, had the thrill that goes with the 7-pound trout he dropped into the ice box. Congratulations, Mike.

Capt. Woodward during the early part of the evening was much concerned with the successful docking of his boats during the strong northeaster, but fortunately the wind moderated and all were docked without difficulty. A. H. Wynn, of the War Department, in company with Arley Hart, of Hyattsville, Md., spent a week's vacation fishing at Ocean View and was delighted with the results.

Capt. J. L. Goldsborough, of Piney Point, is reported to have rewarded the efforts of his party late Saturday evening by putting them over the rock pile off Tall Timbers in time to land four nice rockfish all in the neighborhood of 12 pounds. Capt. Taft Tippett, of Ridge, had rough weather at the Middles and confined his fishing inside the Point-No-Point light on what is known as the "edge," where his party of prominent Washingtonians landed three bluefish and 100 croakers, all large. These anglers stopped fishing when the count had reached 100. The fish were iced down and returned for distribution to unemployed families, for which three cheers.

It is undoubtedly a lucky break for this writer that my hat was accidentally left in the custody of some good friends at Point Lookout on the 21st of this month. Our nice catch of bluefish and the excellent food enjoyed by all was no doubt responsible for my absentmindedness.

Since reading in the Sunday edition of a local paper the column written by my good and congratulatory friend, Fulton Lewis, who so capably edits Angler and Hunter, I hesitate to ever attempt the repossession of said hat, having fully decided to let it rest on the top of anoher dome. It might have shrunk. Thanks, Fulton, I'll try to live up to the principles of Ike Walton, the same that I have found in you and our pleasant associations along the shores of the Chesapeake and York-Spit-Light. Fair criticism is knowledge gained and I still have room in the old skull piece for that kind.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 29.—Sharpsburg retained its lead in the Washington County Baseball League by defeating Boonsboro, 9 to 3, while Hancock, winner of the first half of the season, was virtually eliminated by yesterday's 5-to-3 defeat at the hands of the Antietams of this city.

Sharpsburg won with a four-run rally in the seventh inning. A squeeze play tied the score and a delayed steal sent over the winning run.

Krownapple scttered 12 hits to defeat Hancock. The Cabbies defeated Mount Briar, 9 to 8; the Chevies won from the Woodmen, 5 to 4, while the Eagles defeated Williamsport, 6 to 1.

Sharpsburg has won five games with no defeats, while the Blue Sox, idle in league competition, is in second place with three victories and no defeats.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 29. The first week of second-half play in the Valley League saw the Culpeper Champions carrying on to victory, in spite of a shifted line-up and the absence of several star players.

Culpeper recorded four straight victories until halted by Waynesboro in the second game of a double-header yesterday. The Champions continued to win despite the loss of Douglas, star first-basemen; the injury to Herb Hash, ace hurler, and the departure of two infielders.

Front Royal All-Stars, runners-up for the first-half title, showed they are to be reckoned with again by halting Harrisonburg yesterday and are tied with Waynesboro and Harrisonburg for third place. Had not Mundy clouted a home run with men on bases to give Orange a victory over the All-Stars Saturday, the Front Royal club would probably be in first place with three straight wins.

Orange, Heurich Divide.

Orange demonstrated that the victory over Front Royal was no fluke by coming back yesterday to blank the Heurich Brewers in the first contest. The Brewers turned the tables in a whitewash dose in the nightcap.

Charlotteville, in the ruck of eight straight defeats, finally snapped out of it Sunday to wallop Staunton, 10 to 1.

Harrisonburg had its streak of eight straight victories halted yesterday by Front Royal, Lefty Stankus again proving too good for the runners-up for the title a year ago.

Won One Game of Three.

The Heurich Brewers managed to win one of their first three starts in the second half, losing to Culpeper and breaking even in a twin bill with Orange.

The schedule for this week:

Tuesday—Waynesboro at Harrisonburg; Front Royal at Culpeper.
Wednesday—Orange at Staunton; Heurich at Charlottesville; Front Royal at Waynesboro.
Saturday—Orange at Harrisonburg; Heurich at Staunton.
Sunday—Harrisonburg at Culpeper; Staunton at Waynesboro; Charlottesville at Orange; Heurich at Front Royal.

Radcliffe Eliminates Rice in Tennis Upset

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 29.—Wright, Hagerstown, and McLaughlin, Mercersburg, defeated the Frederick doubles team of Rice and Price yesterday as the Cumberland Valley Tennis Tournament was continued after rain had delayed play for several days. The score was 6—3, 6—4.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., July 29.—Middletown kept in the lead in the pennant race of the county league by defeating Thurmont, 8 to 4; Union Bridge set back Taneytown, 4 to 3; Brunswick took the measure of New Windsor, 4 to 1, and Emmitsburg chalked up its first victory by winning from Woodsboro, 6 to 3.

Coming from behind, Union Bridge staged a ninth-inning rally to nose out Taneytown on the home field before a large crowd. Taking advantage of Minnick's wildness in the first inning, Taneytown scored three runs. Riffle, first up, struck out, then Shilling passed Clingen and Bud Ecker. Blettner, next to bat, lifted a long, high fly to center field, which Bankert dropped and the ball rolled under the fence, permitting all runners to score. Taneytown threatened to score again in the same inning, but Minnick settled down and held the Carroll County team to one single the remainder of the game.

Shafer Not in Form.

Middletown gained revenge by trouncing Thurmont, which gave the Valley team its only setback of the season. Paul Shafer, Thurmont's ace moundman, had an off day and gave up 15 hits. Middletown scored first in the initial inning and added two more in the third frame. The Valleyites clinched the game in the fourth session when an error and singles by W. Hauver and A. Hauver counted for two runs.

Brunswick and New Windsor battled on even terms in one of the best games of the season until the seventh inning, when singles by Gosnell and W. Younkins and a triple by Magalis gave the Railroaders two runs. Youkins held New Windsor to three hits, two of which, doubles by Talbot and Benedict, gave the Collegians their only run.

Emmitsburg chalked up its first victory by setting back Woodsboro. The north county team clinched the decision in the fourth frame when a walk, fielder's choice, pass and singles by Stoner and Saylor counted for two runs.

Listed Shares At Peak Value For Four Years

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, July 29.—Financial and industrial statistics bear out the theory that the United States as a whole has climbed far out of depression depths.

Thus far the value of all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange on July 15 approximated $37,000,000,000, as compared with $30,752,107,676 on the same date last year. The figures are more striking when it is realized that the aggregate value of all shares listed on the exchange is now the highest since August, 1931.

The highest value ever reached by total stock exchange listings was attained in September, 1929, when it amounted to $89,668,276,854. Admittedly the current value of around $37,000,000,000 is not impressive when compared with that figure, but when contrasted with the depression low of $15,633,479,577 in July, 1932, it shows an advance of about 140 per cent.

Gilt-edge bonds are now near their highest prices in history. All domestic bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange have advanced about $7,500,000,000 in value since the depression lows. Add this to the similar gain of $21,500,000,000 in stock values, and it is apparent that holding of all domestic securities have registered an astonishing increase of almost $30,000,000,000 (B) in the course of three years.

This rise in security values is roughly equivalent to the entire record-high public debt of the Federal Government, and far exceeds the huge cost of the New Deal to date.

The increase in security quotations is only one of a number of impressive upturns in major financial indexes over the past three years. The steel industry, for example, is in the midst of a contra-seasonal advance in operations that apparently forecasts heavy autumn business activity.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading continued quiet on the stock exchange today, due chiefly to vacation influences. Gilt-edged securities, transatlantic issues and home industrials were mostly firmer, while home rails remained steady. German bonds and oil shares weakened, and mining shares developed irregularity as rubber issues were uncertain. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The quiet and irregular session on the bourse today was marked by firmness in rentes and a decline in Royal Dutch shares. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—After a quiet opening, the boerse developed a cheerful tone with I. G. Farbenindustrie advancing one point. The market closed firm.

Maturities of U. S. 5 Billions in Year

Obligations of the United States Government in the hands of the public and which will mature within 12 months amount to $5,423,118,080. They consist of Treasury bonds, notes and non-interest-bearing discount bills. The Fourth Liberty 4¼s outstanding, which have been reduced to about $1,278,000,000 through successive redemptions, are now called for payment on October 15.

Wilson & Co. 4s Offered Today

A new issue of $20,000,000 first mortgage, 20-year, series A, 4 per cent bonds of Wilson & Co., packers, is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses. The bonds are dated July 15, this year, and are priced at 100 per cent and accrued interest.

The proceeds will redeem $16,922,000 6 per cent bonds due in 1941 and will retire small issues of bonds and preferred stocks of subsidiaries. Annual requirements on the consolidated funded debt, after giving effect to the current financing, will be $805,310. Net earnings after charges for the six months ended April 27 this year were $3,045,335.

The underwriting group is headed by Edward B. Smith & Co. and includes Field, Glore & Co., Speyer & Co., The First Boston Corporation, Hallgarten & Co., Goldman, Sachs & Co., Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, Lazard Freres & Company, Inc., Hornblower & Weeks and Lee Higginson Corporation.

Treasury Offering Thrice Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced last evening that the tenders for $50,000,000 of 273-day Treasury bills, dated July 31, which were offered on July 26, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on July 29.

The total amount applied for was $158,852,000, of which $50,050,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.963, equivalent to a rate of about 0.049 per cent per annum, to 99.941, equivalent to a rate of about 0.078 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Stocks—The market advanced vigorously in the most active trading for two months and marked up many new highs for this year. Favorable corporation reports for the half year and a further rise in steel operations were contributing factors to bullish sentiment. Trading volume was 1,752,170 shares.

Bonds—The corporate bond market continued its steady rising tendency and displayed underlying strength when a flurry of selling directed at the utilities threatened to halt the upturn. Transactions were $9,543,000.

Curb—The majority of the groups improved their price position. Pittsburgh Plate Glass, with a 2-point rise, was a feature. Trading was active, with a volume of 221,000 shares.

Grains—Profit-taking dominated the market and wheat reacted from last week's spectacular rise, July closing at 92, down ¾. July corn at 82⅞ and July oats at 36⅞ were lower.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Advance to New High Prices, With Steels, Motors, Rails and Utilities Leading—Wheat Lower—Gold Currencies Rally.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 29.—Stock market bulls continued to dominate the position and the level of stock prices was lifted to a new high figure. The advance, according to the Sun's compilation of average prices, was the highest in two years for industrial stocks. Steel, Telephone, New York Central, Santa Fe, General Motors, General Electric and other stocks of the first quality were the leaders in a market with around 1,500,000 shares. Cotton was easier and grains had a setback at the close. September futures were down ¼ cent at 92¾ cents a bushel.

Stocks opened higher on the momentum gathered at the week-end and not enough profit-taking appeared to dampen bullish feelings. Steel company issues resumed their advance, helped by the American Iron & Steel Institute's estimate of operations, placed at 44 per cent of capacity this week, against 42.2 per cent last week. The rise in a normally dull season has been the feature of the industrial picture this summer. Steel common sold at a new high price and the preferred issue crossed 100.

The market had several utility reports to digest. Consolidated Gas reported a small decline in earnings, from $2.57 to $2.10 for the 12 months ended June 30, and the stock turned easier, but for the second quarter the profit was 48 cents against 41. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore did a little better than last year in second quarter. Pacific Lighting has a rise in earnings for the year ended June 30 from $2.27 to $4.05 a share and the shares went up 2 points to the best price in two years. The annual dividend is $2.40.

Motor Output.

Motor stocks were firm. Chrysler and General Motors edged up to new high record prices, but the group was not outstanding, outside of Studebaker, which had unwonted activity. Motor production last week is estimated at only a few thousand cars under the week before. The General Motors total was slightly larger, Chrysler was a little lower and Ford was unchanged.

Activity and strength in a number of railroad stocks in the morning trading aroused hopes that the long neglected portion of the market would join the bull movement in earnest. A forward movement would be logical, even though traffic has not increased much. If the motor and steel industries are growing as active as reports indicate, the railroads before long will have more freight to move. The favorites in the early trading were New York Central, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, the Northerns, Illinois Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Lackawanna.

It was found that some of the railroad issues responded readily to small orders. New Orleans, Texas & Mexico more than doubled in value on two transactions. Gains ranged from 1 to 5 points. Rail equipments also made a good accounting. Baldwin and Car & Foundry were features. General American Transportation dropped a point.

In the last hour the public utilities came forward on the tiring of rails. American Telephone sold at a new high price for the year. International Telephone was bought in large blocks. Amusement stocks were lower. Silvers declined 1 to 2 points and chemicals were indifferent. A large number of miscellaneous stocks reached new tops, among them Coca-Cola.

Credit Piles Up.

Return of Hendrik Colijn as head of the Dutch cabinet brought a vigorous rally in guilders here and in London, and foreign markets stiffened in anticipation of that event. Sentiment in the Netherlands is firmly on the side of the gold standard, against devaluation and in favor of further deflation if necessary. Foreign currencies generally were firm against the dollar. Money rates were unchanged and the month-end operations are not expected to throw as much as a ripple over the surface of the excess credit lake.

Now that the pace of industrial recovery is beginning to quicken, allowing for seasonal factors, and that the bull market in stocks and grain is beginning to look more interesting to speculators, the huge reservoir of bank credit and the low money rates may soon take effect. Cheap money has not been of much use in blocking the depression nor in promoting recovery, but undoubtedly it will stimulate greatly the rebound. The danger is that credit expansion may get out of control.

Longer Term Home Loans Seen Inevitable

Trend Toward Mortgages That Run From 20 to 50 Years.

A trend toward the European type of home financing, mortgages that run from 30 to as much as 50 years, is predicted by housing authorities as one of the most valuable lessons that has been taught home owners by the depression.

If this and the other lessons that have been passed out with a lavish hand, sink in thoroughly, authorities believe that the country may not again experience the distress which necessitated the HOLC as a relief measure.

Substitution of long-term amortized loans for the shorter-term type of financing in vogue during the building boom in the post-war decade was described as the chief avenue of approach to sounder financing.

Federal authorities have been preaching the long-term amortized loan since the Government two years ago began to organize succor for distressed home owners on a large scale.

Steel Operations Continue Advance

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—Another increase in steel operations for the week beginning today was indicated by the American Iron and Steel Institute. Steel ingot production for the current week was estimated at 44 per cent of capacity, a gain of 1.8 percentage point over the institute's calculated schedule for last week.

The current indicated rate compares with 32.8 per cent a month ago and 26.1 per cent in the corresponding week of 1934. The rate of operations has shown a steady upturn since the Independence Day week.

Municipal Railway Operates at Profit

San Francisco, July 29 (AP).—The Municipal Railway earned a net profit of $122,245 last fiscal year, Utilities Manager E. C. Cahill reported today.

Wage restorations, totaling $87,000, increased depreciation allowances and an increase in accident reserve cut the profit figure about $43,000 less than for the previous year, but it was $109,000 more than anticipated in the budget, Cahill said. San Francisco is one of few large cities still retaining the 5-cent fare.

Business Profit Up 12 Per Cent Over Last Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—An increase of nearly 12 per cent in corporation profits is indicated in reports for the first half of this year, compared with the same period of 1934. The rate of gain is larger for the entire six months against last year than the indicated increase shown by selected corporations during the second quarter of this year, compared with the first three months.

The 12 per cent advance was made by 170 companies in a widely diversified classification of organizations which reported profits and losses for the half-year during the last two weeks. Aggregate earnings were $358,977,470 this year, compared with $320,974,330 during the first six months of 1934.

Although there are no comparable figures for previous years for exactly the same list of companies, income analysts declare the total probably is the best since 1931. That result has been shown in reports of selected firms whose previous reports are available.

Not all corporations were on the profit side of the ledger for the 1935 months, and there were many which suffered a reduction in profits this year because of increased expenses. Some turned losses of last year into gains this year; there also were many which slid into the red from large black statements of 1934.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

FRIENDS of the merit system are hoping for the prompt elimination of the Gore amendment in the AAA measure, which would place all positions paying $4,000 or more subject to Senate confirmation, when that bill comes up today before the House and Senate conferees.

BAKER.

This is the latest of a number of similar attacks on the merit system. Two such were killed at the last session of Congress. Senator Gore, it is recalled, was once defeated at this session in an attempt to attach the amendment to the NRA bill.

The Civil Service Commission already has condemned the AAA patronage amendment as dangerous and pointed out that the civil service should not be continually subjected to this sort of attack.

Many members of Congress, it was revealed at hearings on civil service legislation, have complained that patronage adds greatly to their troubles. They have said that instead of coming to Washington to enact laws they find they are here to act as employment agencies. There is growing sentiment among this group for putting all Government positions under civil service, with the exception of those directly concerned with Administration policy.

"The dangers of the Gore amendment have been pointed out on many prior occasions," declared E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes. "But, it appears that there is always someone at hand to try the plan out again, and consequently it is neccessary once more to point out that any such scheme not only would limit definitely the opportunities of the civil service, but in effect would throw the entire civil service into hands of spoilsmen, by giving them control of the principal technical positions in the Civil Service Commission itself.

"As a rule Government officials who come into office with the intention of opening up every means of patronage eventually discover that the Government's work can be carried on efficiently only if career men are afforded proper opportunities," Babcock said.

It is recalled also that the Commission of Inquiry on Public Service Personnel, which recently conducted an extensive investigation under auspices of the present Administration, made a report which indorsed career service and the merit system 100 per cent.

Edward A. Preble, who retired last month after 42 years with the Biological Survey, is spending the summer with his family in New Hampshire.

Melody Barge.

Moonlight over the Potomac
As it lies in night's embrace;
Laughter and happy voices,
And music of exquisite taste!
Melody Barge has anchored;
And, as Kindler lifts his baton,

A symphony soars skyward—

It floats above the river
Where boats drift with languid ease,
As lovers keep their rendezvous
Beneath the willow trees.
Then, in the hills of Arlington,
Where our soldiers lie at rest—
It breathes a benediction
Upon those who stood the test.
—MATTIE RICHARDS TYLER (P),
Register's Office, Treasury.

Miss Jennie Hester Dwight, (P), Widows and Dependents Claims Service, Veterans' Administration, will retire Wednesday at her own request, having completed 30 years Government service. Miss Dwight's home is in Michigan. She expects to travel after her retirement.

Maryland Apple Crop Is Declared 'Uncertain'

College Park, Md., July 29 (AP).—Albert F. Vierheller, extension horticulturist, described Maryland apple crop prospects as "still a little uncertain." He said orchards in some sections are showing spotty conditions.

Those in the Hancock-Smithsburg section were described as about "the most uniform with clean fruit and generally good set."

By H. I. Phillips.

The Automat of the Curbstone.

Enter the park-o-meter! It's a slot machine to regulate automobile parking. You drop a coin in the slot for a half-hour stay and pay for overtime.

• • • •

Oklahoma City has introduced it to American life. It may or may not sweep the country, but anything that promises to solve the parking problem will be watched with interest.

• • • •

What to do with the bus while shopping is a question that has broken down millions of American minds.

• • • •

The park-o-meter is a metal hitching post with meter attached. Oklahoma has lined its main streets with them. You pay to park. If you park too long for the initial nickel, a flag on the meter drops. Thaffic cops patrol the area and tag the cars that have apparently been parked for the weekend.

• • • •

The theory is that motorists will do their shopping more swiftly when they know that a meter is ticking away and running up the overhead.

• • • •

The pest of American streets is the "parking hog." He lives only four blocks from the city center but he drives to work in his sedan, parks in front of the office and leaves it there until night, if the law permits. And even if it doesn't.

• • • •

Then there is the lady who wants some aspirin tablets at the drug store about 300 yards away. It's a short putt, but she insists on driving.

• • • •

She wrecks the fenders of half a dozen cars trying to squeeze her flivver against the curb.

• • • •

Then she finds she hasn't room to get out and has to phone for somebody to come and extricate her. The result is usually a complete tie-up of all traffic.

• • • •

Public parking spaces have sprung up thicker than the Tom Thumb golf courses of 1929, but the parking hog has insisted on parking in the busy streets or dying in the attempt.

• • • •

The park-o-meter may be just what the doctor ordered. It is capable of developments and we see no reason why, for an extra nickel, a motorist can't get a cup of coffee and a buttered roll.

Plant's Workers Hit Tax Contract

Kelly-Springfield Exemption at Cumberland Queried.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., July 29.—The contract exempting the Kelly-Springfield Co. from city taxation was criticized today in a resolution filed with city council by the local union of united rubber workers.

The resolution said the union members "question the high-handed, unparliamentary, undemocratic and probably unconstitutional method of ratifying the contract without all the members of the city council and taxpayers of this city knowing the substance of the contract."

The union, composed of workers at the Kelly-Springfield plant, said in the resolution that it does not question the wisdom of the tax exemption. It was filed without comment on the part of any city official.

Police Seek Bandits For 2 Bank Robberies

Amelia, Va., July 29. (AP).—Capt. H. B. Nicholas, State Police Superintendent, today said he believed the bandits who robbed the Union Bank and Trust Co. here Friday were the same ones who looted a bank at Burkeville eight days before.

Officers continued their search for the gunmen who took between $1,000 and $1,500 from the local bank in a bold daylight holdup, but Sheriff Madison De Kraft said a Hunt to Petersburg and the Carolina line failed to reveal any clues. State and local officers are aided by Department of Justice agents.

10,000 Public Enemies

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

Chapter XVI. — Bunko-Men Bakers.

An escaped convict from a State prison was picked up recently by local police on the Western coast. His fingerprints were taken as a matter of routine and in the same workings of that routine a telegram flashed back from Washington that he was to be held for the warden of a Midwestern prison as an escaped convict.

The man was a life-termer, who had "gone over the wall." Inasmuch as the State of his incarceration had no laws providing for the death penalty, he could boast of his exploits after having left the penitentiary. Among other crimes he had committed in that State following the break, was the murder of an aged farmer for purposes of robbery. The slayer made a strange statement.

"I guess I could have gotten a lot of money if I'd wanted it. I had a chance to steal a mail sack that I was pretty sure had plenty of dough in it. Then there was a little national bank that I could have kicked in without any trouble. But I thought I'd better lay off—those were government jobs."

The convict discussed certain matters freely; he was secretive, however, about the prison break.

"I was a little desperate right then or I wouldn't have gone over the wall," he explained. "We won't talk about any part of that."

For this man to "go over the wall" it was necessary to get out of his cell, to walk the entire length of the cell block, go through heavily barred doors, travel down another corridor, pass through other heavily barred doors and finally reach the prison yard.

Here he crossed a wide space, which is supposed to be clearly lighted at night, then, standing some distance from the prison wall, he made several attempts before he finally succeeded in throwing a long rope equipped with a grabhook over the top of the wall. The wall at this prison is 35 feet high, necessitating a climb of that distance on one side and an equal drop on the other.

Fugitive Feared Wrath Of Federal Officers.

The inner guards testified that the man hid when the prisoners were being counted in their cells that night, that he later appeared and cowed them with a revolver. Then with his rope he crossed the yard and got out.

The prison siren, wailing its eerie news of an escape, did not sound until after the shooting began. One naturally wonders how long the guards waited after the prisoner had "jumped" that 35 feet before they began firing.

This convict, who committed a murder which was a State offense, risked no added punishment because he already had been sentenced to life imprisonment. Moreover, in the State where he was incarcerated, it is as easy to obtain clemency after two convictions for murder as for one. He, therefore, as concerned punishment, committed no crime whatever by bribing guards, escaping from prison and then killing a man. But he was careful to avoid offending the peace and dignity of the United States Government.

Only one condition brings about this viewpoint—the surety of apprehension and retribution. In a way, with the Federal forces, these go together. Federal Courts, presided over by men who have no fear of their jobs and who are selected after a searching investigation of their careers, their affiliations and their ability, possess an excellent reputation for fidelity to the principles of justice.

Government agents, now that the disgrace of prohibition no longer exists, are faithful to their trust. There are no scandals, for instance, in the Post Office Inspection Division, or the Secret Service. The Narcotics Division is rigorous in its demands upon the men who seek to eradicate the dope menace in America.

The various border patrols are, as a rule, free of contamination, and at least one of them, the Border Patrol of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, is patterned largely on the same lines which have been so successful in J. Edgar Hoover's bureau. The record of this patrol is a model which can well be patterned after by every well-meaning law enforcement agency, of which there are many.

Single Signature Traps Man Wanted Six Years

Somewhere in every case, Hoover believes there is a black spot which prevents it from being a perfect crime. This black spot may be the lack of an alibi, it may be a fingerprint, it may be a fad or a foible of the accused person which leads to his apprehension, or it may be a tiny link such as was presented in what is known as the case of the Economy Wholesale Grocery. This involved one John Orifino, who, with Joseph Randazzo and Rosalino Saputo, evolved a dream of an illegitimate fortune.

They formed the Economy Wholesale Grocery & Baking Co. in Toledo, O. This done, they bought in tremendous lots, through fraudulently established credit. After hundreds of thousands of dollars in merchandise had been shipped to the concern, and creditors were pressing for payment, a funeral wreath appeared on the door, with the notice that owing to the death of a partner, the building would be closed for five days.

This caused an investigation. The Credit Men's Association obtained a court order to admit them to the building. It was empty. The thousands of dollars' worth of stock had disappeared; so had Orifino, Randazzo and Saputo. The national bankruptcy act had been violated, so the Bureau of Investigation was called into the case.

Special agents began a difficult job. Employes suddenly had been struck dumb. Books had disappeared. It was found that carload after carload of merchandise had been shipped to Watertown, whence it had disappeared, as well as all other clues. The case seemed dead, beyond the fact that two of the subjects, Randazzo and Saputo, had fled to Italy, where they were safe from extradition.

For the local police to have followed this case, a minimum of two detectives would have been necessary on a hundred chases after false clues. In the Bureau of Investigation, however, the knowledge of a case does not rest at the point of origin. Every one of the 30 field offices is fully cognizant of all circumstances, especially if the chase be one of import.

Therefore, when distant leads developed in the Orifino case, the special agents who worked upon them were as fully informed as though they had taken part in the original investigation in Toledo. One day, six years after the original failure of the Economy Whole sale Grocery & Baking Co., the Detroit office suddenly became the center of much interest in the missing Orifino.

Blast and Fire Reveal Grocery Bunko Game

It was 5:30 o'clock in the morning. Patrolman John Jackson, of the Detroit Police force, swung his club as he walked down a dingy warehouse street and passed a building occupied by the International Wholesale Grocery Co., run by Joseph Caruso and Samuel Cantalanotta. Suddenly the earth rocked. The patrolman staggered from the impact of a terrific explosion. Then, as he saw the sweep of smoke and flame from the windows and roof of the building, he hurried for a fire box and turned in an alarm.

The fire department worked swiftly—so swiftly, in fact, that evidence was discovered which showed conclusively that the fire had been a "touch off," begun by the explosion of a keg of powder, which in turn had ignited trailers of rags and newspapers leading to open barrels of gasoline. A second discovery was that there was no stock in the building—the place contained bare walls and nothing more. Here was another violation of the national bankruptcy act, with seemingly no connection, however, with the Toledo affair.

Nevertheless, special agents throughout the United States had for six years regarded every suspicious-appearing business action as a potentiality in the Orifino case. With the international fire, Detroit agents began an immediate checking process. Caruso and Cantalanotta were easily found; it was evident that they were mere figureheads. The brains seemed to rest with one Thomas Toti, the general manager, who had disappeared.

The books were examined, every record, every scrap of paper. Finally upon a warehouse receipt was found the signature of Toti, which, compared with the signature in evidence on other bankruptcy cases, showed a remarable similarity to that of John Orifino. The two samples were submitted to a handwriting expert and declared identical. The chase for John Orifino of the economy failure therefore was hot again.

The usual procedure of investigation followed. The life of Thomas Toti was dissected and compared with that of John Orifino. His habits were gone into, his likes and dislikes. They went into family history, even to the addresses of distant cousins. Finally they learned that John Orifino's son had been missing for some time.

This seemed inconsequential, especially since all of John Orifino's family had disappeared with him. Nevertheless a new chase began. At last someone said he believed the son had been sent to prison for stealing an automobile.

The prisons were searched. The name of Orifino did not appear. Then a comparative quest was made to match a photograph which the special agents had obtained. That is a rule also—to obtain all possible pictures. At last daylight dawned. Paul Grana, serving time in Atlanta Penitentiary, was the missing Orifino's absent son.

His answers to questions were evasive. The special agents did not persist, but sought the prison records and found that he wrote often to a Mrs. Cauto at an address in Detroit. The special agents went there. No, the motherly Mrs. Cauto never had heard of anyone called Orifino. She was just a friend of Paul Grana—that was all.

So the special agents searched the real estate records and there found the lead they wanted. The Cautos had bought this house. They had moved here from an address on East Congress street, where they had lived for years, even while the head of the family was operating in another city. The records of the East Congress street address showed the occupants to be the family of John Orifino. A week later, the 6-year fugitive tried to sneak home to see his wife. The special agents and police grabbed him and took him to jail.

After a time, he decided, in the parlance, to "blab." So John Orifino and Joe Caruso and Sam Cantalanotta went to jail, and the mystery of the Economy Wholesale Grocery & Baking Company was ended, due to dilligence, persistence and the fact that Government agents are enabled to work as though the United States were only a city and the officers merely stationed in different wards.

Gauging Freaks.

It is difficult to recommend "correct" bidding on a freak hand. Thousands of people write me to ask how I would bid some hand containing crazy distribution and a profusion of void suits and singletons. I must answer quite frankly that I do not know. It would depend entirely upon the other players in the game, for one method may be good against weak players and another method against strong players.

Today's hand occurred in a pair tournament of the American Whist League. It was bid by about 40 expert players and at scarcely any two tables was the bidding exactly alike. Some experts passed where others bid; some reached a Grand Slam, while one pair stopped at five clubs. The bidding which I liked best was that given below:

West, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
1◇(1)	Pass	2♠(2)	Pass
3♣(3)	Pass	3◇(4)	Pass
4♣(5)	Pass	4NT(6)	Pass
6♣(7)	Pass	6NT(8)	Pass
7◇(9)	Pass	Pass	Dbl.(10)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Some players preferred to pass a freak such as the West hand, but I think the opening diamond bid is proper since West wants not only to bid but to rebid both of his suits.
2—Almost everyone agreed on this bid except for a few One-over-One extremists whose erroneous reasoning is that since the one-spade response is forcing, there is no reason to bid two spades. Obviously, if East bids only one spade, he will never be able to show the full strength of his hand.
3—About this bid there can be no question.
4—Having made a bid which is forcing to game, East can afford to proceed slowly and give as much information with each bid as possible.
5—Each time West rebids clubs he infers additional strength in diamonds, for he bid the diamond suit first.
6—The conventional bid. Unfortunately, East can not bid five notrump which would show the Kings of two bid suits and allow West to bid a Grand Slam as a matter of course.
7—West jumps to six clubs to show his Ace and the fact that he does not require any great amount of support.
8—Among expert players a bid of six notrump is nearly equivalent to a bid of seven in a suit if any suit has been agreed upon. While it can be passed, it is considered a strong invitation to bid seven.
9—West not only has added values in distribution, but actually can not risk a notrump contract.
10—South refused to pay attention to the bidding, which advertised the freak nature of West's hand. Having the Ace of East's first bid suit, he decided that the Grand Slam could not be made.

The Play

There is obviously no defense against seven diamonds and West's one mistake was in not redoubling.

On the Air Today

At a late hour yesterday Phil Lampkin reported that approximately 2,200 votes had been cast in his Pacemakers contest—a search for a songstress to appear each Tuesday night with the orchestra. Although the voting today could change the final standing, Lampkin advised last evening that Marie Duchon had a generous lead and "it looks as though she will be the winner."

Four candidates were heard last Tuesday night in the Pacemakers program. Two were presented in light classical numbers—Miss Duchon and Kathleen Lawlor. The other two—Kitty Simonds and Marian Meitzler—are exponents of popular, topical tunes.

Miss Lawlor, as of last evening, was Miss Duchon's closest competitor, which goes to prove that a radical change has taken place in the listeners' collective taste. Usually the torch singer or crooning voice is the type that draws the listener.
